Germans Loose Flying Torpedoes On British Town

Propeller Drives New-Type Bomb; Reich Adopts Plan Of Solo Raiding

The War Today

NAZI BOMBERS over England for the first time using huge aerial torpedoes, abandon mass attacks for solo raids; British retaliation attacks hampered by weather.

ITALO-GREEK tension continues as Rome's press and radio forecast "clash," and Greek generals confer with Soviet attaches.

GERMANY REFUSES safe-conduct guarantees to American child-refugee ships, declaring British waters are mined, as Congress completes action permitting ships' passage; American Legion passes out of danger zone.

BRITAIN AND ITALY swap blows from Gibraltar to Italian Somaliland, as Egypt reasserts her neutrality pending expected Fascist attack from Libya.

Motorized Thunderbolts

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 21.—Aerial torpedoes—propellor-stemmed cylinders of destruction—were loosed by Nazi bombers tonight in attacks which smashed houses by the row and buried uncounted victims in the ruins.

The torpedoes were hurled, along with shriek bombs, at one southeast town after a day of ceaseless hit-and-run attacks by lone Nazi raiders while the Royal Air Force kept its steady counter-punching at German bases.

A whole row of eight little worker cottages was smashed into a tangle of debris where the torpedoes were launched horizontally. Numerous other residences were wrecked.

Others Believed Trapped

One old woman just put to bed by her son was in a house ripped to splinters by the explosion. The son alone crawled from the wreckage.

Not one brick was left upon another where the adjoining house had stood.

Late into the night firemen and rescue squads dug into the ruins for bodies. Beneath other homes voices were heard faintly and rescuers believed they might find some still alive who had sought shelter in basements and were trapped.

"Shook Whole Town"

A witness said the explosion "shook the whole town." Its crater measured more than 30 feet long.

Customarily aerial torpedoes are launched at sea from planes diving close to their targets.

Bombs Sharpen Eire's Dilemma

By the United Press

Dublin, Aug. 21.—The bombing of four ships along the Irish coasts by German planes and the crash of a Nazi warplane on a mountainside in County Kerry menaced today the neutrality of Eire, in regard to both Germany and Great Britain.

Irish leaders took a serious view of the Nazi attacks and said at the same time that any attempt to end Eire's neutrality in favor of Great Britain would be likely to provoke civil war and chaos in the 26 counties under Eamon de Valera's government.

There are growing fears in some quarters that Britain, failing in efforts to obtain a mutual defense agreement with De Valera, might decide upon some action to forestall any Nazi attempt to use Ireland for a "back door invasion" of

Boy, 8, Burned In Fire Despite Rescue Effort

Overcome by smoke and severely burned, 8-year-old Gary Newman, 427 Madison street northwest, was rescued last night from the burning home of his uncle, Harry H. Brodie, at 1209 Farragut street northwest.

He was sleeping in the attic of the two-story stucco house, where the fire originated, with Brodie's sons, Jerome, 19, and Zebbie, 10.

Asleep on the second floor, Brodie, owner of a plumbing company, was awakened by cries from Mrs. Rutherford O. Diehl, occupant of an apartment in the house, who saw the flames reflected from an adjacent building.

He fought his way through dense smoke to the attic, took the New-

Italy, Greece To Clash Soon, Rome Told

Greeks Plan to Burn Albanian Villages, Duce's Press Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 21.—A "clash" between Italy and Greece in the "near future" was predicted tonight by the Italian wireless while the Fascist press campaign against that little pro-British kingdom reached a new crescendo of violence.

The wireless cited the "sharp tone" of that very campaign as indicating a showdown was approaching and remarked that this was the presumption in "political quarters."

The newspapers published assertions that Greeks were planning to burn Albanian villages in the Greek region of Ciamuria—a region now declared by Italy to be rightfully part of Fascist-held Albania—and that armed bands were ready, "especially in the event of complications," to massacre the inhabitants.

Greece was accused of acting as a "more or less voluntary provoking agent on behalf of Britain."

Quoting Virginio Gayda, one of Italy's main journalistic spokesmen, the wireless said that a "final solution" would concern not alone the Province of Ciamuria "but also parts of the region of Janina."

Trotsky Dies, Blaming Stalin For Attack

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, Aug. 21.—Leon Trotsky died tonight after whispering an accusation that his pickax assailant "most likely" was a member of the OGPU, Soviet secret police.

A savage attack by a confidante late yesterday, felled the one-time Bolshevik leader, who had spent more than half his 60 years in exile. An emergency operation and administration of oxygen were futile. He died at 8:25 p. m. (Eastern standard time) before brain surgeons from the United States could reach him by chartered plane.

The attacker was identified by police as Jacques Mortan Vandendreischd, 30-year-old native of Iran. Scene of the attack was Trotsky's fortress-like residence in the nearby village of Coyoacan, where a machine gun attack on Trotsky failed last May.

Mrs. Trotsky was at her husband's side at the end, together with attending physicians—some of Mexico's most noted surgeons.

The exile died just 40 minutes before Dr. Walter Dandy, noted Baltimore brain surgeon, was to have left Washington by plane to operate on him.

Joseph Hansen, Trotsky's secretary, told of the dying man's declarations. Hansen said the genius of the Bolshevist revolution also gave him this political testament:

"Please say to our friends that I am sure of the success of the Fourth

Nazis Refuse Safe Conduct For U. S. Child Refugee Ships

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright, The New York Times.

Berlin, Aug. 21.—American vessels passing through the war zone around the British Isles for the purpose of evacuating British children can receive no guarantee for safe conduct from Germany, it is stated by authoritative German quarters tonight.

Such guarantee, it is added, could not be given by any belligerent power because of the presence in these waters of mines, over which neither Germany nor any other nation can exercise reliable control.

[The German announcement followed by a few hours' completion of Congressional action on legislation to permit American vessels to enter belligerent waters to remove refugee children provided safe passage is guaranteed by belligerents. The bill went to the White House.]

"Assurance of such a guarantee which, under the present circumstances, could only be ineffective, would be a crime against the children who are to be evacuated," Germans stated. "The Reich government will never be guilty of such a crime.

"Under these circumstances, the American plan, the humanitarian motives of which remain unquestioned, can only be illusory, and these same humanitarian motives make it impossible for any responsible government and military lead-

Says He Could Show in Debate It Is Inadequate and Poorly Organized

Headquarters Set Up

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rushville, Ind., Aug. 21.—This southeastern Indiana farming community—which likes to call Wendell L. Willkie an "adopted son"—will become his personal headquarters for at least the early part of his Presidential campaign.

Before leaving by plane for New York City for a week-end visit, Willkie announced tonight that he would reside here for at least a month. While he is in New York, Mrs. Willkie, remaining behind, will look for a house to rent.

The candidate and his party drove to Indianapolis this afternoon and left the Municipal Airport there at 6:07 p. m. (Central Standard time).

(Arriving in New York at 10:38 p. m., after a light in a new stratoliner, which he appeared to enjoy immensely, Willkie announced he would have lunch tomorrow with Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania.

Willkie has not disclosed his plans beyond the formal opening of his speaking campaign in Coffeyville, Kans., about mid-September. His decision to make Rushville his first base of operations, however, gave rise to belief that he would return here frequently throughout the campaign.

Owns Five Farms There

It was explained that Willkie enjoys staying in Rush County, where he owns five farms and where Mrs. Willkie, the former Edith Wilk, lived for many years. Associates pointed out that he could travel quickly to most parts of the country from Indiana.

Willkie conferred during the day with John Hamilton, executive director of the Republican National Committee, and James H. Douglas, chairman of the Illinois Willkie-for-President clubs.

Earlier, he criticized the Administration's defense program in a statement proposing that President Roosevelt debate the question with him on one of the Chief Executive's defense inspection trips.

"I think I can show conclusively that the Administration defense program is hopelessly inadequate, delayed and improperly organized," Willkie said.

"I think it would be an appropriate thing for Mr. Roosevelt and me to engage in a joint debate on defense during one of his visits to defense projects."

Willkie added that the President should tell the people how much military equipment is on hand and

Ickes Calls Back His Stamp Gift 'Because of Fuss'

Secretary Ickes' stamps—bits of gummed, imperforated paper that have stirred a row in Congress—were summoned home by their owner yesterday "because there was such a fuss."

"There is no secret; I am not concealing anything," Ickes said at a press conference. Senator John A. Danaher has demanded an investigation of imperforated stamps of the issue of March 15, 1936, the issue that Ickes acquired.

"I never sold any or offered any for sale. I have, however, given some to collector friends," Ickes said. He admitted giving blocks of stamps to New York University to be sold at auction to benefit refugee relief.

Conscription Debate

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

The Senate blocked an attempt to make the pending conscription bill draft wealth as well as man-power yesterday amid charges the defense program is being delayed by manufacturers "striking" for higher arms profits.

Rejection of the wealth draft came on a point of order raised by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, that the Constitution requires revenue-raising measures to originate in the House. The Senate voted 54 to 23, to sustain the point of order.

As the Senate acted on the proposal—which would require forced loans in war from all persons owning property—Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, warned members that while they "might dodge" the issue now, it will be put up to them squarely within a short time.

With the wealth draft out of the way as far as the conscription bill is concerned, opponents launched a renewed attack on the measure, charging the Army with "deliberately" holding down voluntary recruiting to aid passage of the bill. A main argument of the bill's opponents has been that an intensive campaign for voluntary enlistments would make conscription unnecessary.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, in the melee, accused Secretary of War Stimson of suppressing information on the success of the voluntary system. He declared that the August issue of the "Army Recruiting News," an official publication of the recruiting service, had been held up after publication on Stimson's orders and two pages deleted which contained a telegram from Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, congratulating the service on exceeding its quotas.

Tells of "Strike"

Brandishing a copy of the "censored" magazine, Wheeler told the Senate 27,000 copies had been so treated. He called upon Stimson for an explanation, shouting:

"If that isn't deception, I don't know what the word means."

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who is chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, declared the whole Army-Navy warplane program is being held up "because of a strike of subcontractors." He said plane manufacturers were unable to go ahead with Government orders because the firms which make plane parts refuse to accept the 7 or 8 per cent they are allowed on such contracts because they can get 18 per cent on British orders.

"Business men have folded their arms," Walsh cried, "and said 'we

6-to-4 Vote Tables Sumners Bill; King Calls Senate Unit for Today But Attempt to Bring His Measure To Floor Is Considered Unlikely

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

All hope that Congress will enact any District suffrage legislation at this session was shattered yesterday when the House Rules Committee, by a vote of 6 to 4, tabled the Sumners resolution calling for District representation in Congress.

Counter moves were started immediately to bring a companion measure before the Senate and to revive the Kennedy local suffrage resolution in the House District Committee, but there was general agreement among influential members that Congress is not in a mood to consider the question at this time.

Republicans who had taunted House Democratic leaders into supporting the Sumners resolution after the Democratic Party had written a District suffrage plank in its platform, were quick to take advantage of the failure of the majority party in the House.

Representative Allen (Republican), of Illinois, who may be the chairman of the Rules Committee if the Republicans get control of the House next January, said:

"When the Republicans take charge next year, we will report out the resolution and give the members of the House an opportunity to discuss and vote on it. That is only four months off."

Allen said he expected to become chairman of the Rules Committee because Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority member, would prefer the chairmanship of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Allen was one of the four members who voted against tabling the request for a special rule on the Sumners resolution. The others were Chairman Sabath and Representatives Delaney (Democrat), of New York and Michener (Republican), of Michigan.

Members who voted to table the legislation for the session were all Democrats. They were Representatives Cox, of Georgia; Smith, of Virginia; Nelson, of Missouri; Lewis, of Colorado; Colmer, of Mississippi, and Clark of North Carolina.

Two Members Absent

Two members of the committee who were favorable to the resolution were absent. They were Representatives Dempsey, (Democrat), of New Mexico, and Fish (Republican), of New York.

Representative Sumners, who brought the resolution out of his Judiciary Committee a month ago, declined to comment on the action of the Rules Committee.

Speaker Bankhead expressed surprise and Majority Leader Rayburn commented that it would not have a chance of favorable House action without a special rule. Only Tuesday the two House leaders had instructed Sabath to bring out a rule on the resolution. Rayburn had predicted its prompt passage following action on conscription and taxes.

King Calls Senate Group

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, when informed of the House action, expressed regret and stated that he would call a meeting of his special subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee today to decide what to do in the light of the development.

It was not considered likely, however, that the subcommittee would attempt to bring the King resolu-

New Rates May Save Gas User Nickel Monthly

The average domestic gas consumer would save 5 cents a month under a new rate schedule proposed yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission by the Washington Gas Light Co. A new schedule of rates will become effective September 1, and the company submitted this one.

Completing the one-day public hearing on the annual rate reductions, the commission took under advisement the new rate schedule, which offers a total saving to consumers of $105,300. The commission's chief accountant, V. A. McElfresh, differed by some $3,000 in the amount which he proposed the company should offer. His figure was $113,845.

Stephen S. Mason, rate engineer of the utility, said some 67,500 domestic consumers would benefit by the reduction. Although the average consumer would save 5 cents monthly, those using more than 3,700 cubic feet of gas a month would save even more, he said. Thus the average savings for domestic users as a group would be 9 cents a month.

Actually, under Mason's proposal, $70,810 of the total amount available for reduction would be allocated to domestic consumers of Schedule A. For consumers using Schedule E, which is the commercial and industrial rate, $30,580 would be allocated for rate reductions. Users of Schedule F, which is the wholesale apartment house service rate, would realize a total reduction of $3,710.

The company's rate engineer stated the average monthly bill last year for domestic consumers was $3. The new bill would be $2.95.

The amount available for reduction is determined by the company's operating expenses and operating revenues. For the test year ending June 30, 1940, McElfresh placed the revenues at $8,060,387, and the expenses at $6,300,506.

Preparing Legal Groundwork

Roosevelt's Aides Map Policy On Bases, Sale of Destroyers

By Turner Catledge.
Copyright by New York Times

Early steps to dispel the "fog" surrounding this Government's intention in three important matters of national defense—collaboration with Canada, leasing from Great Britain of naval and air bases, and transfer of over-age destroyers to the British navy—were predicted by official sources yesterday.

The chief motivation for this forecast was a two and one-half hour conference of four Cabinet members and the chiefs of the armed services at which the legal questions involved in the acquisition of the additional defense bases, as well as the transfer to Britain of the old war vessels, were explored.

Participating in the meeting were Attorney General Jackson, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox; Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State; Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and Green Hackworth, legal adviser to the State Department.

The only official announcement of what took place at the conference, held at the Justice Department, was made by Attorney General Jackson.

"We discussed legal questions involved in the proposal and procedure for American acquisition of off-shore naval and air bases along

Experts Seek Postoffice Bomb Clews

Six postal inspectors, including two out-of-town explosive experts, last night sought the sender of a "contact" bomb which exploded in a branch postoffice at 1438 U street northwest, at 5:35 a. m. yesterday injuring two employes.

Local police were asked to aid postal authorities in some phases of the probe, but Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said he was not at liberty to divulge what his men were doing.

It was learned, however, that the investigation centered in the District, the bomb having been posted here. Agents were attempting to trace the mailing place last night.

Explodes in Pouch

The infernal machine, described as small and poorly constructed, exploded in a mail pouch as it was being taken from a truck at a loading platform in the rear of the postoffice.

It was addressed, inspectors said, to a woman in the northwest section, whose name and address are being withheld at the request of Postmaster Vincent Burke. He said publication of the name might hinder the investigation.

Harry B. Hess, 58, of 110 West Broad street, Falls Church, Va., a mail truck driver, and Hyman Ritzenberg, 32, of 223 O street southwest, a clerk, were carrying the mail sack which contained the bomb when the explosion occurred. They narrowly escaped serious injury.

Unloads Truck

Hess had picked up the sack at the City Postoffice about 5:30 a. m. and carried it with a number of other sacks to the U street office. There with Ritzenberg's assistance, he began unloading the truck.

Ritzenberg said the truck was almost empty and he had his hand on the string of a sack when he heard two reports, like giant firecrackers going off.

"I looked down at my leg and it was bleeding and so was my shoulder," he said.

He added that he turned to Hess and asked: "What was that? He said 'It was a bomb.'"

New Forecasts Leave D.C. Cold

A great mass of cool air, racing across Washington from northwest Canada, yesterday set a new record for August "cold" and left Weather Bureau experts with only a .800 per cent batting average on their first five-day forecast, issued Saturday.

The unexpected speed of the "cold front" wrought havoc with the Bureau's innovation, which was made possible by scores of lonely observers in Arctic wastes and on distant tropical isles. The predictions for only three of the five days proved accurate.

On Monday, with the early arrival of the cold air, there were showers and cooler weather instead of the "fair weather, with moderately warm temperatures," which was predicted. On Tuesday there was cool, dry weather all day, instead of "moderately warm weather, showers, then cooler temperatures."

But, although consternation held sway at the Weather Bureau, no complaints were heard from downtown Government offices yesterday as the city went through its coolest August 21 in 11 years. The mercury dipped to 58 degrees at 3:30 a. m. and rose only to 76 degrees at 2:30 p. m.

Still, undaunted, the weather experts yesterday came forth with their second long-term forecast, this time a four-day prediction, which read: "Fair generally Wednesday to Saturday, moderately cool, slightly warmer Friday and Saturday."

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Martha's Vineyard, Aug. 22.

EYE-WITNESS FROM NORWAY

We sprawled on the sand of one of the island's southern beaches, in the ceremonial of a clambake. Egged on by the veteran clambakers, we had nipped out more than our fill of the aromatic indescribables. The waves gurgled darkly, the moon danced in and out behind the clouds, but we didn't pay any attention.

Harlan Miller

Instead, we listened closely to a clean-cut, intense young Norwegian who had barely gotten out of northern Norway, by about the thickness of a life preserver, just before all Norway became a Nazi colony.

I can't name him, because he still has relatives under the Nazi conquest.

* * * *

"Yes," he was saying, as I crawled over to escape my cup of clam juice, "their fliers always machine-gun the life boats and even the survivors swimming in the water.

"Among themselves they say jestingly that they do it for machine-gun practice."

* * * *

Before the Nazis came the Norwegians had enjoyed other harmless pranks. There was the masquerade party at the American Legation he attended in Oslo, when the irrepressible American Minister, Daisy Harriman, rode into the living room in short skirts, on a bicycle, while the orchestra played "Daisy, Daisy."

"—when the Nazis come"

But all that ended when the Nazis came. In the Oslo cafes the Norwegians ignored their conquerors, pretended not to see them when they clomped in. The waiters ignored them, too, until they were yanked over by the arms or belts and told to serve the invaders first.

* * * *

His American wife, caught in the south of Norway by the invasion, saw all this . . . Up north he lingered as long as the British remained, joining his King's forces as a reserve officer . . . But when the British left Narvik he got his wife north through the occupation troops.

* * * *

"I knew," said the Norwegian refugee, "that the Nazi planes bombed and machine-gunned every refugee ship that left. But we preferred to run the risk of death rather than to remain as slaves under the Germans."

* * * *

They caught the last refugee ship out of Tromsoe, in the Arctic. As they had expected, their ship was bombed, machine-gunned and sunk, flaming from incendiary bombs.

The moon was now overcast; it was cooler, and some were hunting driftwood for the fire.

* * * *

"They followed their standard tactics," he said. "First they machined-gunned the ship's bridge, to frighten or kill the navigation officers, so they couldn't zig-zag the ship."

Our Norse refugee had not until then believed the stories about the Nazi pot-shots at survivors in lifeboats or in the water.

"—a tale as the clams baked"

But as he floated in the icy waves, watching his ship sink, he saw the Nazi planes dive low over the survivors, their machine guns chattering away, the water spurting up all around him. Then he began to believe.

* * * *

One man swimming nearby was shot through the thigh. In his wife's lifeboat another survivor was shot through the chest and killed by a plane which skimmed overhead not 30 feet.

It must have been great sport for the pilot.

* * * *

"Some of the young men," his American wife broke in, "took to the hills when the Germans captured Oslo. They had no weapons. Only ropes. But there were trees enough for some of the Norwegian traitors—there weren't many, but enough—who sold out to the Nazis."

She was a girl who had once attended the same school as the b. w.

* * * *

"Even with their practice shots at the survivors," continued the Norse refugee, "the Nazis are not good shots. Time after time we saw outnumbered British planes outfight them in the skies."

* * * *

The well-bred matrons from the Eastern boarding schools were listening closely. So were the Midwesterners, hearing this strange tale off the New England coast, where the two refugee newlyweds were recovering at her mother's cottage.

* * * *

Someone said it was dark enough for a dip in the ocean au naturel. But no one paid much attention. It was getting quite cool.

"I want to become an American citizen as soon as I can," said the handsome young Norwegian, "I want to join the American Navy."

'Smear Campaign' Charged to Ickes

Wiley 'Astonished' President Would Allow Such Speech

By the Associated Press

Expressing astonishment that President Roosevelt would authorize such a speech, Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, yesterday asserted that Secretary of Interior Ickes had opened a "smear campaign" in a radio address that "reflected fear."

"This speech of a Cabinet member is the opening gun of a smear campaign whose purpose will be to divert the American peoples' attention from the fact that the job has not been done which the Democrats promised to do in 1932 and 1936," Wiley told the Senate.

"I am astonished that the President of the United States would authorize such a speech," Wiley said. "From now on we can expect that the atmosphere will be thick with mud because the New Deal has opened a smear campaign."

Reflected Fear, He Says

Declaring that President Roosevelt had selected the New Deal "hatchet man" to reply to Willkie's acceptance speech, Senator Wiley charged the Ickes blast was full of "falsehoods" and reflected the New Dealers' fear of that "great American who spoke at Elwood, Ind., last Saturday."

Meanwhile, Claude R. Wickard, President Roosevelt's nominee to the post of Secretary of Agriculture, characterized Wendell L. Willkie as "just a Wall Street boy trying to make good on the farm."

Wickard, who was appointed Monday to succeed Henry A. Wallace in the Cabinet, was introduced to reporters by Wallace at the latter's press conference.

Wickard observed that his farm in Carroll County, Ind., was only about 40 miles from Willkie's home town of Elwood, but that he had "never heard much about Willkie as a farmer until recently."

May Speak in Maine

He added, in reply to a question, that he understood all of Willkie's farms were participating in the AAA program.

Wallace, the Vice Presidential nominee, indicated that he might campaign in Maine, one of the two States which went Republican in 1936.

Wallace plans to leave by train next Tuesday for his home in Des Moines, where he will deliver his acceptance speech August 29. He said he would remain "in the Corn Belt" until September 18.

Speaker Bankhead, who was a candidate himself for the Vice Presidential nomination at the Chicago convention, had been designated to notify Wallace officially of his selection, but yesterday he designated Chairman Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, to act in his stead.

Wallace explained that Bankhead "told me personally that the press of duties might make it difficult or impossible" for him to leave the Capital and added that "he and I have at all times had the kindliest feelings toward each other." He applauded the choice of Jones as "magnificent."

On another political front, C. B. Tuttle, vice president and treasurer of the S. S. Kresge Company's 700 stores, voluntarily told a special Senate committee appointed to police this year's elections that he had collected $8,926 for the Willkie campaign from 265 Kresge executives and was certain he had a right to do so.

Afterward, Chairman Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, told reporters that there was "no Federal law "prohibiting such activities but that the committee probably would suggest some legislation "to prevent undue influence by private employers that is coercive in its effect upon voters."

Byrnes Complained

Tuttle's testimony resulted from a complaint by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, that Tuttle's letter soliciting contributions might be part of a Nation-wide effort by business leaders to "force employes to contribute to the campaign fund of the Republican Party."

Tuttle was said to have flatly denied that his letter was part of a coordinated campaign and to have testified that he would fire any store manager who sought contributions from lower paid employes.

In another political development Secretary Ickes denied at his press conference a charge by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, that President Roosevelt slept while the Nazis armed. Ickes said that the Administration had spent "hundreds of millions" on defense.

He told his press conference that Republican critics of Mr. Roosevelt overlooked the fact that his first use of public funds on taking office was for the construction of 20 destroyers, 4 cruisers, 4 submarines and 2 aircraft carriers.

Alloted From PWA

The total cost, he said, was approximately $238,000,000 and the money was allotted from the 1933 Public Works appropriation.

"The record of PWA," Ickes continued, "shows that more than $497,000,000 of PWA money was transferred to the Army and Navy for national defense purposes, that is exclusive of the regular military appropriation and of money used by the Federal relief agencies since 1933 to provide civilian work in navy yards and on Army posts."

Ickes said also that the Administration had built huge public power projects essential to national defense. One of these, he added, was the Bonneville project on the Columbia River which is providing power for the Aluminum Company of America to start producing aluminum within the next ten days at Vancouver, Wash., for airplanes to be built in West Coast factories.

"Bonneville," Ickes said, "is typical of the public power projects essential to our national defense and such men as Senator Bridges overlooked that."

are out for profit and our profits are 18 per cent and we are getting them.' How can anyone vote to conscript manpower when the arms manufacturers insist on the same profits as in peacetime?"

Walsh urged that the Government "take over" any plant which refused defense orders. He was joined in his attack on such manufacturers by Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, author of the wealth draft amendment.

Condemning arms manufacturers who "put their patriotism on a dollars and cents basis," Lee added, "and yet they are expecting Congress to draft manpower to protect their wealth."

The Lee proposal provides for a census of the wealth and income of all citizens and aliens and authorizes the President in any war emergency to require individuals to buy 1 per cent in bonds in proportion to their wealth.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, termed the amendment "revolutionary," adding:

"When you start to confiscate property, you are getting close to the day when you'll conscript labor, and legislation of that kind can lead only to dictatorship."

Reject Draft Postponement

Early in the day, the House Military Affairs Committee voted down, 15 to 3, a proposal to postpone any draft until war is declared.

It also approved increasing the basic Army pay from $21 to $30, a procedure already voted by the Senate, and eliminated any provision for "home guards." This action means that men 18 to 21 and 45 to 65, who would be registered under the House bill, could not be drafted without further legislation.

Downtown, Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones said $78,500,000 would be loaned to the Boeing Aircraft Co., the Bendix Aviation Corporation and the Curtiss-Wright Manufacturing Co. to expand their aircraft factories.

After disposing of the Lee amendment, the Senate turned to one offered by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, to limit the number of men drafted under the bill to 800,000. At present the measure contains no limit and Army plans call for training close to 4,000,000 over the next five years if world conditions do not improve.

Lodge argued that Congress could consider further levies of men next year, and Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, cosponsor of the bill, said he would accept the amendment.

A vote on the proposal was put off by a series of speeches attacking United States Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt for his speech Sunday urging conscription and sale of American destroyers to Britain.

Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, charged Bullitt "was brought back to the United States to incite a wave of hysteria to get America into war."

Asks Investigation

Senator Clark called on Attorney General Jackson to investigate whether Bullitt had violated the criminal code, conviction on such allegations carries a fine of $500 and a year in prison.

The Missourian charged that Bullitt in urging the people to telegraph their Congressmen in support of the measure was in direct violation of Section 201 of the code.

Bullitt's warning that Germany will attack the United States if it conquers Britain "shows conclusively that he was trying to generate a war spirit," Clark said.

"I know from unimpeachable sources," he shouted, "that Bullitt's speech was given out as an official release of the Department of State on the stationery of that department.

"The Ambassador, who ought to be in Europe attending to his business, instead urges people to write and telegraph Congressmen and demand the privilege of being called into service."

Senator Barkley, majority leader, defended Bullitt from both attacks.

tion to the Senate floor at this session so long as the Sumners resolution is deadlocked in the House.

There were indications that local suffrage proponents will renew their fight to force the House District Committee to take up the Kennedy resolution, which would give the District an elective form of self-government at once. The legislation does not embrace national representation and consequently requires no Constitutional amendment.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, criticized the action of the House Rules Committee as "harmful" in view of the Democratic Party pledge and asserted that he will urge Chairman Randolph to call a meeting at once to consider his local suffrage resolution.

"I previously had held back on pushing my proposal," Kennedy said, "for fear that it might interfere with the Sumners resolution and ruin what chance the District had for any suffrage action at this session.

"Now that obstacle has been removed and there is no reason why the District Committee should not take up the local suffrage, particularly in view of the statements of the majority and minority leaders."

Chairman Randolph about ten days ago started a poll of his committee to determine whether a majority could be obtained to bring out a local suffrage resolution. His last announced count was 7 to 7 with seven members still unabulated.

It was reliably reported, however, that House leaders had advised Randolph not to bring out any suffrage legislation at this session.

and local suffrage proponents were told that the President himself is opposed to self-government for the District.

Before going into executive session, the Rules Committee listened to a plea by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Maryland, that his bill to cede back to Maryland all the residential and business sections of the National Capital be given a privileged status.

Members questioned him about the practical application of his plan and then advised him that he should first seek approval of the House District Committee before seeking a rule. Nichols had not asked a rule, but had requested that if a rule be granted on the Sumners resolution that he be allowed the opportunity to offer his bill as a substitute.

During the discussion Representative Cox called the Sumners' resolution "a sham and a delusion," and Michener attacked Nichols' proposal as impossible, because of the complication involved in unscrambling District and Federal agencies in the National Capital.

Nichols insisted that he was sincere and that he be lieved his plan much simpler and speedier for giving the residents of Washington the franchise.

"But a Toe in the Door"

At the same time, he predicted that not more than 40,000 would be concerned as the majority of Washingtonians would retain their legal and voting residence in the States.

"My bill is honest and fair," he said. "Anybody who is seriously interested in getting the vote here can't help but support it. The Sumners resolution is but a toe in the door."

At another point in the discussion, Nichols said that he doubted that a majority of the people of Washington want District suffrage.

After listening to Nichols explain roughly how he would separate the Federal portion of the District from the residential and business portions, Michener asked:

"After all this procedure is followed, is the funeral of the District provided for?"

The recent legislative maneuvers which ended in a fiasco yesterday began immediately after the Democratic convention when Rprsntativ Randolph took the House floor to congratulate the Democratic Party on its action.

Challenged by G. O. P.

The Republicans immediately challenged the Democratic majority to bring out a suffrage resolution for a vote before adjournment.

Representative Rees (Republican), of Kansas, pointed out that the Democrats had a clear majority in Congress and that if they were sincere in the platform pledge that there was no reason to postpone a vote until the next Congress.

Representative Sumners, . who more than a year before had introduced a compromise resolution after listening to prolonged hearings on the Norton-Capper and Randolph-Lewis proposals, thereupon called a meeting of the House Judiciary Committee to consider it.

The resolution was reported favorably a week or so later by a vote of 14 to 3.

Majority Leader Rayburn promised his support and Speaker Bankhead gave it tacit indorsement, while Minority Leader Martin predicted that almost every Republican member of the House would vote for the resolution once it was brought on the House floor.

Although several of the more influential members of the Rules Committee were known to be hostile to all District suffrage proposals, House leaders hinted that they could force a favorable vote as they often do on Administration measures.

At least one of the hostile members, who yesterday voted to table the request for a special rule, said he would be willing to grant the rule because of his respect for "Judge" Sumners.

Members who tried to analyze the attitude of the House Rules Committee expressed the opinion that there was no demand for the Sumners resolution in the House and that many considered that it had no place in a program of national defense and similarly important legislation.

Attack Snarls Profits Tax Bill in House

Committee Told Plan Discriminates in Favor of Big Business

By the Associated Press

Proposed excess profits tax legislation was snarled—and threatened with change—in the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday by a bi-partisan attack alleging the measure discriminates in favor of big business and makes little corporations "pay the bill."

Committee members also said that at their closed meeting slow progress was made in reading the freshly prepared 98-page draft because of its highly technical nature.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, predicted that as a result of this tie-up the bill, proposing a 25 to 40 per cent levy on profits, would not reach the House floor before next week. House leaders had it scheduled for consideration this Friday and Saturday.

The bill besides the excess profits tax would repeal the Vinson-Trammell Act's limitations on defense contract profits, and permit manufacturers of defense items to amortize the cost of new plants over a five-year period for tax purposes.

The attack, said by other members to have been led by Representatives Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio, and McKeough (Democrat), of Illinois, centered around a memorandum produced by one member. This document alleged that 80 large companies would pay little or no tax under the bill's present terms.

The memorandum declared the proposed measure was "inequitable and discriminatory" and gave preference to corporations which have been uniformly prosperous over a period of years.

Members also were said to have contended that the measure as now written would cause hardships to small and new concerns.

Doughton, commenting on these reports, asserted that there had been no showing of "real hardship" on any concerns but that there had been complaints that the measure discriminated in favor of certain classes of companies.

"You can't write a tax bill without the charge of discrimination being made," he declared.

Willkie Assails Defense Program

on order. He asserted that Mr. Roosevelt "probably would be making a speech, anyway" on some of his defense inspection trips and that a debate thus would not waste the Chief Executive's time.

"It would just give me the privilege of making a speech at the same time," Willkie continued, "and then each could reply to the other."

Willkie's trip to New York brought to 7,200 the miles he has traveled on an interim campaigning tour since he left for a resort hotel in Colorado Springs July 8. He has gone 6,500 miles by air and has spoken in the District of Columbia and eight States.

Before leaving Indianapolis, Willkie praised Hoosier hospitality in the following statement:

"I have been back home again in Indiana for one week and I have seen something over 300,000 people. I have been overwhelmed by the warmth of the reception.

"I am going back East for four or five days and then I'll return to Rushville, where I hope to establish a temporary home until the start of the active campaign.

"I am doing this for two reasons: Because I feel so much at home in Indiana and also because it is so centrally located it is an extremely convenient place from which to operate.

"All persons experienced in such matters have told me that the meeting at Elwood (the Willkie notification ceremonies) was the largest political meeting ever held in the United States. Surely none was ever more enthusiastic.

"The people and the press of Indiana have been very kind to me and I am most appreciative. I am very much indebted to those who handled the Elwood arrangements.

"I don't believe any large meeting ever was handled with more dispatch and less confusion than the Elwood notification."

Meanwhile, Willkie headquarters made public telegrams of support from . . . Lawrence Lowell, of Osterville, Mass., president emeritus of Harvard, and Bernard Flexner, of Hanover, N. H., an attorney who served in 1917 as a member of a Red Cross mission to Rumania.

Lowell telegraphed Willkie that he regarded "a third term for Roosevelt as a long step toward Nazifying American institutions."

A delegation of Elks from his home town of Elwood presented Willkie a life membership in that lodge.

Willkie said he would return to Rushville early next week. His son, Philip, planned a trip to Chicago to visit an uncle, Ed Willkie.

Frank Walker Reported Offered Farley's Job As Postmaster; Said to Be Receptive

By the Associated Press

Frank C. Walker, close friend of President Roosevelt and one-time head of the old National Emergency Council, was mentioned yesterday as the probable successor to James A. Farley as Postmaster General.

Informed politicians said they understood Mr. Roosevelt had offered the post to Walker and they thought he would accept.

Walker, a Montanan who went to New York to practice law, was treasurer of the Democratic National Committee in 1932. He now operates a chain of theaters in the East.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Two Senators, a Representative and a former Governor were named by National Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn today to head regional divisions in the campaign to reelect President Roosevelt.

Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, was named chairman of the Southern division, with headquarters at Birmingham; Senator Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois, Midwestern chairman, with headquarters at Chicago; Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, Southwestern chairman, headquarters at Dallas, and former Gov. Leslie Miller of Wyoming, far Western chairman, headquarters at San Francisco.

The Northeastern campaign will be directed out of national headquarters here.

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Edward J. Noble, who resigned recently as Undersecretary of Commerce, pointed out today that his name had been mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination for United States Senator from Connecticut and stated: "I do not seek such a nomination.

"As stated in my letter of resignation to President Roosevelt," he said in a statement, "my primary interest is in the national defense and my reason for resigning is to help hurry defense."

Detroit, Aug. 21 (AP).—Hal H. Smith, chairman of the Michigan Republican finance committee, said today a letter sent to Federal Judge Arthur F. Lederle soliciting campaign contributions was a "mistake."

Noting that letters were sent to a "selected list," Smith said: "If I had seen Judge Lederle's name, or any member of the committee had seen it, I am sure it would have been stricken, because we all know Judge Lederle is a strong supporter of President Roosevelt. The committee has no intention of carrying its appeal to officeholders, Federal or otherwise."

J. Lyter Donaldson said after conferences with Civil Service Commission officials and Kentucky members of Congress yesterday he had been unable to determine whether the Hatch Act would require him to resign as chairman of the Kentucky Democratic Central Committee in order to continue as State highway commissioner.

"I found reluctance on the part of those with whom I talked to give an official opinion in my case," he said before leaving for Frankfort. "I hope to obtain sufficient information by next Monday, however, to help me reach a decision.

Roosevelt Accused Of Playing King

Representative Bruce Barton (Republican), of New York, last night accused President Roosevelt of adopting a "kingly attitude" in announcing that "he is too busy to speak to the American people, too exalted to give them any account of his seven years' stewardship."

Assailing also the President's preparedness record after calling attention to "stove-pipe cannon," "phony tanks" and "ancient planes" which he saw during his Ogdensburg tour, Representative Barton said in a speech before the Willkie Club of Washington:

"Like the English King he spends much time in having himself photographed examining the national defenses. But where the King of England sees antiaircraft guns, the President at Ogdensburg, N. Y., saw pieces of stove-pipe stuck into blocks of wood. Where the King sees modern tanks the President saw ancient trucks with paper signs on the sides marked 'Tank.' Where the King sees thousands of modern planes the President saw 133, of which at least 100 are too old for effective service."

Blue Army Wins As Black Collapses

Victory Ends Greatest Maneuvers 23 Hours Ahead of Schedule

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Its left flank crushed and its front pierced in four places, the invading Black army collapsed today at 1 p. m., ending the Nation's greatest peacetime maneuvers 23 hours ahead of schedule.

Blue forces, commanded by Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, had battled their way across the Racquette River through the night and early morning, by individuals, by squads, by companies and by regiments until the entire force was across when hostilities ceased. In the air, though, the war went on, four raiding Black bombers being driven off by Blue pursuit at 2 p. m.

Tonight the huge, brown tent cities spread over this 1,700-square mile military area were coming down, the troops packing up to leave for home. Without sleep for 72 hours, weary with incessant marching and fighting, suffering from a drop in temperature of 40 degrees in two days, they threw themselves into the job of breaking camp with all the enthusiasm of schoolboys on a holiday. They were going home.

First Capitalites Due Back Saturday

District, Maryland and Virginia troops of the Twenty-ninth Division will begin leaving for home Friday at 5:20 a. m., when the 111th Field Artillery (Virginia) will start by train. Other Virginia and Maryland elements will leave during the day and the last will be under way by 7 p. m. Saturday.

The 121st Engineers, of Washington, will start for home by train at 2:20 p. m. Friday and the Special Troops, Washington organization, will leave here at 2:50 p. m. Saturday with Twenty-ninth division headquarters, containing many Washington men. The First Battalion 104th Quartermaster Regiment, from Washington, will start by road convoy at 2:05 p. m. Friday. Troops traveling by train Friday should arrive in Washington late Saturday, those going by road late Sunday.

The 260th Coast Artillery is scheduled to start its first elements by convoy at 1 p. m. tomorrow. The last elements of the convoy should reach Washington before midnight Saturday.

Reserve Officers from Washington and Maryland on duty with the Division will be paid at 8 a. m. Friday and released to go home. Those from more distant points in Virginia will be paid tomorrow at 4 p. m. National Guard officers and men will be paid after their return home.

Rapid Advance

Today's smashing success by the Blue forces along the Racquette followed a day of rapid advance which left them faced with the precarious necessity of making a frontal crossing of a deep river, under fire. It was the same problem which ruined Burnside at Fredericksburg.

As early as 2 a. m., men of the Forty-fourth Division's 104th Engineers ferried riflemen of the 114th Infantry across the river north of Potsdam at Hewittsville in assault boats. Protected by the darkness and the fire of these advanced elements, with a toehold on Black territory, the engineers built a foot bridge on which the entire 114th and 113th trudged across with their machine guns and automatic rifles and blasted a salient 3,000 yards deep and 6,000 yards wide in the Black line.

A few miles up the river, south of Potsdam, at Hannawa Falls, Infantry of the Twenty-seventh Division got across in the same fashion, and at the northern end of the front Pennsylvanians of the Twenty-eighth scrambled over in the darkness and clung like leeches to the river bank.

At a little farm crossing north of Norwood, where a blasted bridge held them up, the District's 121st Engineers, under Col. John W. Gehmann, threw out the Forty-third Division and built a foot bridge and a 10-ton pontoon bridge over which the 110th Field Artillery trundled its guns just as the Blacks surrendered. It was the only Blue artillery to get over.

Swam the River

At 4 a. m. youngsters from C Company, under Capt. William F. Jorgenson, stripped and plunged into the icy water and swam over to find a place for a bridgehead. Other members of the company ferried over troops of the Fifth Maryland Infantry in assault boats. The troops swarmed up the steep bank and poured into the defending Blacks a murderous fire which drove them into cover.

Protected by this fire, Company B, under Capt. William I. Mushake, laid down a foot bridge in 20 minutes, over which the First Maryland streamed at daybreak. With rifles and machine guns, they drove into the opposing infantry and thrust them back into bordering hedges where they held them.

Ready since daybreak to build the pontoon bridge it was ordered to build, the Second Battalion of the 121st cooled its heels until 7:30 a. m., when the equipment, sent forward by the Third Corps staff, finally shoved its way through crowding troops and transport on the narrow roads. The battalion under Maj. Clarence S. Shields, pushed the big aluminum pontoons overboard, got bridge materials together and started to work. Once they were shelled by Black artillery and halted operations until Blue counter-battery fire silenced the guns hidden across the hills. Once they were bombed from the air and fought off the Black bombers with their rifles and with .50 calibre machine guns camouflaged in the fields.

Defeat Certain

While the engineers sweated and the bridge grew foot by foot, into the Black River, their labors brought august attention. Gen. Drum himself came down to the muddy bank to watch; Maj. Gen. Charles K. Parson, commanding the Third Corps, dropped in; Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division commander, visited them several times.

With completion of their bridge, the way was open for Blue artillery and heavy transport. It paved the way for all the fighting power of four divisions. The Blacks surrendered.

Down at the south end of the wavering line, the Twenty-second Cavalry Division and Gen. Drum's mobile forces lashed at the Black flank, thrust it back and moved toward its rear. Plenty of fight was left in the Blacks, but little else. Fight as they might, defeat would have been no more certain; only more complete.

At a farmhouse near the advanced command post of the 260th Coast Artillery, the regiment's officers last night gave a dinner to Washington men, recently made lieutenant colonels. Silver leaves of the rank were pinned by Col. Walter W. Burns, commanding the 260th, on the shoulder straps of Lieut. Col. William T. Roy, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division Special Troops; Lieut. Col. William J. Heale, commanding the First Battalion 260th, and Lieut. Col. William F. Bullis, commanding the Twenty-sixth's second battalion.

O'Mahoney Renominated By 9-to-1 Edge

Wyoming Republicans Rename Rep. Horton In Primary Contest

By the Associated Press

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 21.—Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Democrat, and Representative Frank O. Horton, Republican, were renominated by their respective parties in yesterday's primary on the basis of unofficial returns.

The Republicans nominated Milward Simpson, Cody attorney, to oppose Senator O'Mahoney in the general election. The Democrats chose John McIntyre, Douglas attorney, to oppose Horton.

Senator O'Mahoney, New Deal anti-monopoly investigator and supporter of President Roosevelt for a third term, led Cecil W. Clark, Newcastle attorney, who said he ran because he "could no longer support the party machine," by more than 9 to 1.

Unofficial returns from 602 of the 695 precincts gave:

O'Mahoney, 23,452; Clark, 2,455.

Simpson, aggressive anti-New Dealer, defeated four opponents: State Senator Harry B. Henderson, jr., of Cheyenne; former Representative C. E. Winter, of Casper; former State Senator I. W. Dinsmore, of Rawlins, and State Representative R. R. Crow, of Saratoga.

Returns from 600 precincts gave Simpson 11,294; Henderson, 8,231; Winter, 5,456; Dinsmore, 2,799; Crow, 2,132.

Horton, Wyomings' only representative in Congress, led B. Frank Bratcher, Sheridan attorney, 244,419 to 4,218 in returns from 600 precincts.

McIntyre, Democratic nominee for Congress, left his campaign in the hands of friends early this month and went to National Guard maneuvers. His opponents were Dr. J. C. McHenry, of Gillette; State Senator Green Simpson, of Greybull, and Riley Wilson, also of Greybull.

Returns from 602 precincts gave: McIntyre, 8,516; McHenry, 7,670; Simpson, 5,016; Wilson, 2,970.

Convention Men To Hold Own Convention Here

Convention managers of the Nation's principal cities will open a convention of their own today at the Willard Hotel.

It will be the meeting of the International Association of Convention Bureaus. The opening session, at 10 a. m., will hear Commissioner David McCoach, jr., and Edgar Morris, Washington civic leader.

The meeting will continue through Saturday. Russell Schneider, manager of the Washington Convention Bureau, will be host.

Rep. Hawks to Aid Walter Johnson Rally

Representative Charles Hawks, of Wisconsin, a former amateur baseball star, has agreed to do a little "political pitching" for Walter Johnson at a rally at the "Big Train's" farm, Saturday.

Speaking of Johnson, recently, Representative Hawks said that his "great popularity was won over a long period of hard work in the greatest of American pastimes. His high position in baseball was obtained, not only because of his wonderful ability as a pitcher, but primarily because of his clean living, honesty, and wholesome Americanism."

Md. Lancelot On Pony Wins Jousting Test

A modern Lancelot, Alexander Sleury, of Bradshaw, Md., outrode a field of twoscore other "knights" in a jousting match at Marshall Hall, Md., yesterday for the privilege of crowning the lady of his choice, Elizabeth Weems, Prince Frederick (Md.) carnival queen.

Mounted on a small gray pony, while most of his competitors rode rangier steeds, Sleury charged across the field and stabbed his lance through a steel ring 17 times out of 18 tries.

Adding to the difficulty of the match was the fact that the ring, originally 1 inch in diameter, was steadily reduced until one of only ⅛ inch in diameter was in use. Riders were disqualified as they missed any one of the rings suspended from three arches.

Closely pressing Alexander Sleury, who won a cash prize of $35, was Dick Gales, of Laurel, Md., and the winner's brother, Louis Sleury, also of Bradshaw.

Others to win money awards included three brothers. Finishing in this order were Douglas Parron, of Prince Frederick, Md.; Joe Brady, of Reisterstown, Md.; Charles Brady, of Reisterstown; Malvin Cole, of Glen Arm, Md., and Francis Brady, of Reisterstown.

Approximately 6,000 saw the contest.

Jousting Tournament

By the Associated Press

Prince Frederick, Md., Aug. 21.—Amateur and professional riding stars from Southern Maryland will come here Saturday, August 31, to compete for trophies and cash in the annual jousting tournament for Mutual Christ Church.

The event, the annual mutual home-coming, is expected to attract several hundred spectators and a score or more riders.

U. S. Senator George L. Radcliffe will address the knights on the field in the afternoon and former Gov. Harry W. Nice, now a Republican candidate for the Senate, will make the coronation address at the ball in the evening.

Riding will be in three classes—professional, amateur and novice—and in addition to the cash awards, there will be a number of crowns and two silver trophies, the Parran and Goldstein cups.

Dr. Everard Briscoe, of Prince Frederick, is in charge of the tournament, with John S. Williams, of Mutual, assisting. Judges will be George W. Dorsey, Arthur W. Dowell and William W. Duke, all of Prince Frederick.

Policeman Gaile's Funeral Today

Funeral for Uel M. Gaile, 40, First Precinct policeman who died Monday of a head injury, will be held at 3:30 p. m. today in Hysong's funeral home.

The injury was suffered August 1 when the patrol wagon in which he was riding stopped suddenly, flinging him against a partition.

The Rev. Harry W. Craver, pastor of the Central Ballston (Va.) Methodist Church, will officiate at the services. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery. Surviving, besides his wife, are two sons, Oscar O., 19, and Uel M. Gaile, 21, and a brother, Elbert Gaile, Wynnewood, Okla.

Refugee Ship Safely Passes Mine Fields

American Legion West of Combat Zone Around British Isles

Copyright by New York Times

The Senate was assured by Senator Barkley, the majority leader, after he had talked with the State Department late yesterday, that the steamship American Legion "is now out of danger." He said the transport, bearing refugees from Petsamo, Finland, to New York, was 900 miles west of the British Isles.

Senator Barkley made his announcement in reply to Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, who had charged in a Senate speech that the Government erred in sending the vessel through the war zone. After the majority leader had concluded, Senator Bone said he still believed that "if the ship had been sunk 96 Senators would be discussing the possibility of war."

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, said at his press conference that she had followed the course close to the British Isles, notwithstanding the planting of German mines, because reports and British advices stated that it was less hazardous than the route farther north where the British have sowed extensive mine fields.

Newsman Gets Gruesome Warning

Shanghai (Thursday), Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Harold P. Mills, American newspaperman here, today revealed he had received two packages containing the heads of Chinese.

Mills, who has been blacklisted by the Japan-sponsored National Government of China in Nanking, said the gruesome gift obviously was a warning that he would be assassinated if he remained in Shanghia.

Mills is publisher of the American-owned Chinese language newspaper Hwa Mai Wan Pao.

Wallace Aims For Abundant Farm Supplies

Soil Conservation Also Object in '41; Allotments Up Later

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace last night announced a 1941 farm program to provide for soil conservation and "maintenance of abundant supplies" in the interest of national defense.

Acreage allotments for crops other than wheat, he said, will be announced later in the season when 1941 production and effects of the European war on consumer demand may be determined more accurately. A wheat acreage allotment of 62,000,000 acres already has been announced.

Wallace said that farmers have "set up for themselves two goals that gear into the defense program—conservation of soil and maintenance of abundant supplies."

Object of the soil conservation feature, he said, was "to store an 'ever normal granary of fertility' in the soil that is just as real as our supplies of corn, wheat and cotton.

Aim for Abundance

"The second goal is abundance, and farmers are aiming at food and fiber supplies sufficient to meet all current needs and furnish adequate reserves . . ."

Both the agricultural and range conservation features of the new program follow the same general lines of those in effect during the present year and in 1939, he said. They are based on recommendations made by farmer-committeemen and ranchmen at national conferences held earlier this summer.

In an attempt to stabilize production, the program provides that commercial vegetable growers be required to plant at least 80 per cent of their acreage allotment in order to earn full compensation payments. The same provision may be applied to other crops in areas where production varies widely from year to year.

3 Major Plans

The program contains three provisions, designed to obtain greater conservation, which may be used in lieu of total soil-depleting acreage allotments in areas where feed crops are not generally grown for market:

1. Establishment of a five-year conservation plan for a farm, with deductions from allotment payments for failure to attain the 1941 portion of the plan.

2. Determination of a minimum acreage of erosion resisting crops, with deductions from payments for failure to maintain this acreage.

3. Provision that no farm can earn more of its payment on special acreage allotments than is earned on soil-building allowance.

Wife and Son See W. Va. Man Slain; Suspect Is Held

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 21.—While his wife and young son watched in horror, Allen Hess, about 35, was shot and killed at his farm home today about noon at Needmore, a few miles west of here. Conners McDaniel, about 30, of the same section, was being held tonight without formal charge pending an inquest.

Hess, shot in the abdomen, lived about an hour but was dead when a physician from this city reached him with State Police.

State Police said they were told there had been trouble between Hess and McDaniel for some time and the fatal difficulty grew out of the use of a mule borrowed from McDaniel's father by Hess.

Mrs. Hess and her 7-year-old son saw the shooting from an upstairs window of the Hess home, State Police said. The gun used in the shooting was not found, police said.

40-Below as 'Spring' Nears in Antarctic

In 40-below temperature, the staff of the United States Antarctic Service yesterday celebrated the approaching end of the four-month-long winter night.

Dr. Paul A. Siple, west base leader, radioed that the sun was expected to show itself briefly at 12 noon (7 p. m. E. S. T.). However, for several weeks, the sun will be visible only for a short time daily.

Man Mowing Lawn Hurt by Firecracker

Special Dispatch to The Post

Luray, Va., Aug. 21.—Karl Stover, 25, suffered a serious injury to his right arm yesterday when a "dud" bomb exploded as he was mowing the lawn of his brother-in-law, S. Frank Rosser.

The lawn adjoins the county fair grounds, and the "dud" is believed one used in the fireworks display.

Steuer, Immigrant Who Became Million-a-Year Lawyer, Dies

Poor Austrian Boy Who Rose to Fame Has Heart Attack

By the Associated Press

Jackson, N. H., Aug. 21.—Max D. Steuer, 69, who entered this country a poor Austrian immigrant boy and became one of the country's most prominent trial lawyers, died today of a heart attack while vacationing here.

Steuer, who was known for the impressive fees he received—he was reputed to have earned $1,000,000 a year for ten years—was resting on the porch of his suite at Wentworth Hall Hotel when he was stricken.

Defended Charles Mitchell

James J. Carroll, hotel manager, said the attorney's body would be sent to New York tomorrow, where services will be conducted in Emmanuel Temple.

One of Steuer's most famous cases was his successful defense of Charles Mitchell, New York banker, who was charged with evading the payment of $800,000 in income taxes in 1929 and 1930.

Steuer served without pay in the inquiry into the affairs of the closed Bank of the United States in 1931.

Known as a figure in the affairs of Tammany Hall during the regime of John F. Curry, Steuer testified during the recent trial of Tammany Leader James J. Hines, who was convicted of helping "Dutch" Schultz dominate lottery.

Steuer testified that Hines asked him to take up an income tax matter for Schultz, but said he refused the case.

Figured in Spectacular Trials

Steuer never specialized, taking both criminal and civil cases. Among spectacular ones in which he figured were those growing out of the Triangle shirtwaist factory fire in 1909, when 147 lost their lives; the famous Foelker Race Track bribery case, and the Becker murder trial.

Steuer was born in Homono, Austria, in September, 1871. He attended the College of the City of New York, and was graduated from Columbia Law School. He married the former Barbara Popkin, with whom he shared an interest in Jewish philanthropy.

His wife, a son and two daughters survive.

Wise, Va., Aug. 21 (A.P.).—Otis Sergeant and Dewey Haskins are being held in the Wise County jail in connection with an investigation into the slaying of Tom Huffman at Appalachia Saturday night.

Officers said Huffman died after being struck on the head with a brick or rock.

D. C. Marines Await Actual Combat Drills

Reserves Well Ahead Of Preliminary Practice With Rifles

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lakehurst, N. J., Aug. 21.—Well ahead of their training schedule after four days' encampment, Washington's Fifth Marine Reserve Battalion eagerly awaits commencement of actual combat maneuvers.

All companies have completed their preliminary .30-caliber rifle training and will begin today "shooting for record." The time saved from preliminary practice will be devoted to the use of automatic weapons and sham warfare.

The Leatherneck units have been drilling here on one of the world's largest parade grounds, flanked on all sides by moored dirigibles and balloons.

Only one minor casualty has marred the otherwise perfect record of the encampment. One man suffered a minor leg injury but has returned to duty after treatment.

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller today called attention to the fine training record of the battalion despite the loss of a number of officers who have been called up for active service.

Old-Style Cannon Guarding Hawaii

Guns Made in 1904 And Earlier in Five Coast Defense Forts

(This is the third of a series of articles on America's Pacific defenses.)

By W. W. Chaplin.
International News Service Correspondent.

Honolulu, Aug. 21.—Remembering that the United States fleet may be called to duty far away by emergency, the high command in charge of American defense is depending for protection of this first American outpost not only on modern air defense but also on the old-fashioned system of fort and coastal guns.

Service officers are hesitant to give out too many details of coastal defense, so essential to American safety in event of aggression from the Orient, but I was able to obtain a good picture of what is on hand by actual observation.

5 Coastal Batteries

To defend Hawaii there are five seacoast batteries of fixed guns including four 16-inch guns, at least two 12-inch guns and the rest 8-inch guns. There are two 16-inch railroad guns, three batteries (four guns each) of 8-inch railroad guns, and eight batteries (four guns to a battery) of long range 6-inch guns.

In one gun emplacement, the only camouflaged spot on the island, I found one disappearing 12-inch gun which carried a brass plate giving its construction date as 1904.

Another 12-incher, standing behind a wall of sandbags, disclosed on its manufacturer's plate that it was "Model 1895," and below that had been stamped the statement, "Relined 1920."

This gun caught my fancy because it had a 3-inch "piggy-back" gun strapped on top of it with steel bands. I asked the officer in charge what this meant.

Cheaper for Practice

"It costs $1,000 to fire one of these big guns," he said, "and so we have a 3-incher on top so the men can swing the big gun into firing position and then fire the smaller gun, which is automatically aimed the same way."

The 3-inch gun, of course, fires only a fraction of the big gun's range, but it makes a nice pop and satisfies the gun crew. The big guns, I was told, are fired only once a year, as the lining wears out after between 300 and 300 shots and then the whole barrel has to be sent back to the mainland for relining.

Army officers told me that they were in very good condition so far as ammunition goes, that there is enough ammunition stored underground to serve every gun "until it wears out." In the case of the big guns, however, that would mean from 200 to 300 shots.

Nazis Bar Pledge On Refugee Ships

ership to undertake a guarantee of safe conduct through the mine-infested waters.

"Germany cannot have any part in the exposure to additional dangers of children of a belligerent nation.

"The British government itself recognized the impossibility of guaranteeing safe conduct through these mine-infested waters by declining to undertake the evacuation of the children through governmental measures at government expense.

"It was pointed out at that time that neither the required shipping tonnage nor the necessary convoy vessels were at the government's disposal. Only at the expense of the rich parents were a few children able to leave England on private vessels in which case the British government declined to guarantee safe conduct and left the risk to the parents.

"Nor can it be in the interests of the United States or Germany to make possible incidents against the best interests of both nations precluded by the American neutrality law, merely for sake of misunderstood humanitarianism."

"The illusory nature of the American gesture," it is concluded, "must be made unequivocally clear right now in the face of possible attempts to shoulder the Reich with responsibility for the practical infeasability of the plan."

By International News Service

Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, declared last night German authorities evidently misconstrue the measure.

"The measure," Bloom said, "does not require a guarantee of safe conduct. All it requires is a pledge of nonmolestation. I do not believe, when the German government is asked by the proper authorities, and through proper channels, they will refuse to pledge nonmolestation. That is all we want."

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, however, asserted granting of safe conduct by all belligerents was essential to such undertakings.

"The German announcement that they will not grant safe conduct to American vessels going to Great Britain and transporting children therefrom to the United tSates ends the proposal," Pittman said.

"That is self-evident under the bill. The proposal to transport British children to the United States in American vessels is at an end."

Representative Hennings (Democrat), of Missouri, sided with Bloom.

Pointing out the bill has not yet become law, and that no request has yet been made on Germany regarding the proposed refugee ships, Hennings said this Government would have to wait until a request was actually made, and "give them a chance then" to answer.

"I still think there must be some sense of humanity and some sense of decency reposing in the German high command. I believe that when a proposal is made through the proper channels, it will receive the consideration due to an act of the Congress of the United States. Germany is not possibly making total war on women and children."

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who sponsored the bill in the Senate, said vehemently:

"The Germans have reverted to a savage state, and ought to be wiped off the map. This is just an additional reason why they should be wiped off the map."

Defense Zone British Bases May Effect

the Atlantic Ocean," the Attorney General said.

Although Jackson would not amplify further, a departmental spokesman confirmed reports that the discussion also included the legality of transfer to the British fleet, through some means or other, of certain over-age American destroyers. The question of a defensive arrangement with Canada apparently was not taken up by this group, other than as an incidental matter.

The opinion was growing here last night that all three steps would be taken.

Definite steps are expected soon after the President returns to the White House today. One of the purposes of yesterday's conferences, as understood in informed circles, was to prepare the legal groundwork upon which the President might proceed.

Despite the President's admonition against any speculation as to those three possible moves, and regardless of the technical form in which any of them might be made, they are regarded by subordinate officials as intimately interlocked. Whatever is done, however, will be worked out with a view strictly to the defense of the Western Hemisphere, officials insist.

Would Defend Canada

The broad question of defensive collaboration between the United States and Canada has already been settled between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King. The only things to be worked out now are the technical details of setting up the proposed Joint Defense Board and prescribing its functions. Furthermore, the Canadian arrangement proceeds from the determination of this country, quite unilateral in its conception, to go to the defense of the Dominion if the fortunes of war should bring an attack upon her in this hemisphere. These last three words are stressed by officials in their discussions of the Canadian agreement.

The questions of the leasing of new naval and air bases from Great Britain, as a condition of or independent of the transfer of destroyers to the British fleet, as well as the transfer of the war vessels in itself are said to be still open so far as the United States Government is concerned. There was a disposition here even to throw a bit of cold water on the enthusiasm of the British over the possibility that these two moves may soon follow.

The public official attitude affected but little the belief widely held that an agreement in principle has already been reached on both of these steps, and that the Administration is now proceeding silently and cautiously in order to avoid as much controversy as possible in this election year.

Congress Furore Feared

A great part of the discussion over legal phases of the problem is over methods for avoiding Congressional action. A Congressional storm would almost certainly blow up over sale or transfer of the over-age destroyers to the British fleet, causing unpredictable delay if nothing else.

The proposals for defensive collaboration with Canada and for lease of new naval and air bases in this hemisphere would hardly cause as much trouble, although apprehensions have been growing in the legislative branch these last two days lest the joint arrangement with Canada be the first step toward a military alliance with Great Britain herself.

Satte Department officials have been quick to spike any suggestions that this Government seeks or will accept any formal tie-up with England. They denied any knowledge of a report from London today that the British government is seeking a military alliance. The Department said it had heard nothing of the proposal and knew nothing whatsoever about it.

Bombings Raise Eire's War Fears

the British isles.

German bombing planes, overshooting the west coast of Wales, have carried the war into Saint George's channel of the Irish Sea with attacks on four ships.

The Irish Mail Boat Saint Patrick has been bombed off the coast of County Wexford for the second time in four days, it was revealed.

The 1,151-ton Welsh Collier Prestatyn Rose, arriving in Dublin today, reported that it was bombed and machinegunned by three German planes yesterday off Tuskar light at the entrance of St. George's Channel.

The ship's guns and crew members armed with rifles answered the attack, in which "numerous" bombs were said to have been dropped from only 300 feet altitude. The planes were said to have disappeared westward after a 35-minute attack.

At Belfast, Northern Ireland, it was announced that the Norwegian steamer Svein Jari had been bombed and machinegunned off the northwest coast of Ulster, causing injury to two of the crew. It was the first authenticated case of a German air attack on a ship off Northern Ireland.

The Rose Marie, registered at Rotterdam, was slightly damaged in a machine gun attack off the south coast Tuesday.

Bomber Falls in Fog

Tuesday afternoon a German plane crashed near Clochane(in County erry, smashing into the side of a mountain in fog, and was found ablaze by visitors. The crew of six, two of them wounded, surrendered guns and maps and were interned by Eire authorities.

Irish quarters said that Eire was encountering mounting difficulties in maintaining her neutrality.

Eire's island position, a rapidly expanding armed force determined to resist invasion from any side, and a strong sense of national cohesion were claimed here, however, to place Eire in a better position for defense than neutral countries on the fringe of Europe which went down under Germany's blitzkrieg.

Agitation for return of Ulster to form an independent all-Irish union has diminished greatly amid the serious problems arising from the war, but leading officials said the Ulster question must be settled ultimately when there is peace. Ulster might become a serious point in case of a German victory, it was added.

Commenting on Eire's position a well-informed German here said:

"Neutrality is a negative position which earns no reward."

Newfoundland and Canada Confer

St. John's, Newfoundland, Aug. 21 (AP).—A conference between Canadian and Newfoundland officials on defense of Newfoundland ended tonight with an announcement of "general agreement on all points."

How much of today's conference concerned any future possibility of United States acquisition of naval and air bases in Newfoundland was not known.

Nothing official was disclosed on this point. The communique issued after conference, said, however:

"The question of the defense of Newfoundland was given full consideration with special reference to Newfoundland's situation as the first line of defense of the North American hemisphere."

Alexandria Kiwanians To Hear 'AidAllies' Head

Charles Harrison Mann, chairman of the Arlington County Committee to Defend American by Aiding the Allies, will be the guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club today at 12:15 at the George Mason Hotel. He will outline the committee's program for supporting Great Britain in the current European war.

Flying Torpedoes Rained on Britain

a row of stores, and wrecked an empty school air-raid shelter.

The ceaseless Nazi aerial invasion brought another change in tactics—darting attacks by individual planes where only a few days ago they had come in compact, roaring hundreds.

The British admitted it was difficult to get the individual German bombers before they had dropped their bombs, but the Air Ministry announced 13 Nazi planes were shot down during the day.

Solitary raiders appeared here and there along that "corner of hell," the southeast coast; over the industrial Midlands, over Wales and northeast England.

There were civilian dead and many civilian wounded, but as always their number was not stated.

The air and home security ministries said inhabitants of one town were machine gunned.

Late in the day the British declared that the new Nazi campaign had failed in its apparent aim of avoiding losses by not using big concentrations of raiding planes.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, declared in a broadcast that Britain will throw all her resources into an offensive "in the months to come" in order to "cleanse the continent of Europe of the stain and horror of gangster rule."

He said the people of Britain had a right to be encouraged by British air force activities, but he warned them they must not think that the danger "of invasion or of massed attacks from the air is past."

Sir Archibald said that a tabulation tonight showed that since August 8 Britain lost both in home defense and "in our extensive operations over Germany, 194 aircraft against the Germans' 709."

Notwithstanding these "heavy casualties inflicted on the German air force," he went on, "only a small fraction of their heavy bomber force has yet been engaged."

Just how successful had been the characteristic British counterattack with long range R. A. F. bombers was not disclosed.

In an evening communique the air ministry said merely that "owing to adverse weather conditions no bombing operations were carried out over Germnay last night.

"Daylight attacks were carried out yesterday and today on airdromes in enemy occupied territory. Attacks also were made yesterday by aircraft of the coastal command on two enemy destroyers in the North Sea, one of which was damaged."

The greatest damage wrought by the Nazi raiders in day-long attacks on Britain was in the Midlands, where bombs smashed a heavily-populated residential and shopping area. One person was killed.

Some Britons, taking comfort from the fact that the Nazis were now arriving on a "sneak-in" tactic rather than in bold waves as formerly, declared it meant that the British now had the offensive in the air war.

They mentioned the growing scope of British counter-attacks as proof.

A New Weapon

By the Associated Press

Officers in both the Army and Navy Ordnance Bureaus said last night in Washington that they were totally unfamiliar with aerial torpedoes for landing bombs such as Nazi planes were reported to have loosed over England.

Rear Admiral William R. Furlong, Naval Ordnance chief, said that if the missiles were correctly described, "this is certainly a new weapon."

Navy planes lay torpedoes which propel themselves through water similiar to those launched by warships, but Admiral Furlong explained that if they were dropped over land they would fall vertically to the ground.

France Fearing British Raids Will Widen Nazi Rule

Chancy, Switzerland, Aug. 21 (AP).—Britain's long-range bombing flights against industrial cities of northern Italy and southern German war industries are increasing the Petain government's fears that Germany and Italy will extend their occupation over a wider area of France, border reports said today.

Already the Germans have established airplane bases at the western slope of the Vosges and Jura Mountains in an effort to intercept bombers.

French now are fearful that British flights across the area still unoccupied by German soldiers will lead the Italians to demand air bases at Marseille and in the Rhone Valley and the Germans to extend their control to provide air bases south of the Loire River.

Some sources in the area governed from Vichy were said to believe that if Britain resists until winter all the rest of continental France will be placed under occupation.

International. Go forward!"

Police, meanwhile, questioned a Brooklyn, N. Y., girl about her knowledge of the man who attacked Trotsky yesterday.

The girl is Sylvia Agaloff, whom police identified as a sister of Ruth Agaloff, a former Trotsky secretary.

Trotsky, one of the founders of Soviet Russia, lived to see his organization exile him from the nation he helped to construct.

The revolutionary, who, with Nikolai Lenin, once held control over millions of men, was born Lev Davidovich Bronstein on November 7, 1879.

Dismissed from school at 17, he became the leader of the revolutionary "Union of South Russian Workingmen." He was arrested in January, 1898, and sentenced to two and a half years' imprisonment to be followed by four years' exile in Siberia, where he first read the works of Karl Marx.

In 1902 he escaped from Siberia and obtained a false passport to which he signed the name Leon Trotsky, his jailer's name. He lived in exile in Austria, Switzerland, Paris and London.

In London he became a member of a small body of social democrats which included Lenin. It was this party which later split into Bolsheviks and Mensheviks, Lenin leading the Bolsheviks. Trotsky was Mensheviw and remained in that party until it became too moderate for his taste.

In 1905 he returned to Russia and was elected a member of the St. Petersburg Soviet of Workers' Deputies. When the revolution was suppressed Trotsky was exiled to Siberia, but escaped and went to Vienna. In 1914, he went to Zurich and Paris, taking part in publication of a revolutionary newspaper. Trotsky opposed the war in general and his expulsion from France followed in 1916. He found refuge in Spain but soon was deported to South America as no European country dared to shelter so dangerous a revolutionary.

In 1917 Trotsky went to New York where he edited the Russian Revolutionary Novy Mir (The New World). When news of collapse of the old regime was received in March, 1917, he returned to Russia and joined the Bolshvist party in July, 1917.

He played a prominent part in organizing the Bolshevik "October revolution" in 1917, and was named commissar for foreign affairs.

Trotsky was the most popular figure in the Russian delegation during negotiations of the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty with Germany, and then was named minister of war In spite of opposition, he made use of officers of the old regime in building up a new Red army. His new army showed its superiority to the White troops that were ravaging the country.

The difficulties of organizing the new government and building up its policies brought him into conflict with the older elements in the party who accused him of trying to gain the support of the younger men.

Violent attacks on him were made by Stalin, Zinoviev and others. His followers were shifted from their posts and he himself was on his way for a rest in the Caucasus when Lenin died. The campaign to discredit him continued and he lost his post as commissar of war.

On his return from the Caucasus he was demoted and named head of a committee for the development of electric power in Russia. His resignation from this post came in 1925 and he assumed the post of head of the central committee for concessions.

In November, 1927, came his final break with the Soviet powers and he was expelled from the Communist Party for anti-party activities. In January, 1928, he was exiled from the New Russia he had helped to form, being sent to Viernie in Turkestan. In 1929 the exile was made permanent banishment and Trotsky went to Constantinople.

The exiled Bolshevist became a bitter bone of contention in Mexico. His enemies among Mexican supporters of Stalin attempted to silence him and to bring about his deportation. He was subjected to repeated annoyances—interference with his telephone, attacks in the press, constant intrigue against him.

Plan New York Funeral

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—James P. Cannon, national secretary of the Socialist Workers' Party, said tonight plans were being made to have the body of Leon Trotsky brought to New York for funeral services, "to give the working people of New York an opportunity to show their reverence for the memory of this great leader and their hatred and contempt for Stalinism."

The blaze, which firemen said possibly was caused by a short circuit, was confined to the attic.

The Newman child was taken to Children's Hospital with second degree burns of the face and hands. He had been left with the Brodies only a few hours previously by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Newman, who then left for a Florida vacation.

Other occupants of the house at the time of the fire were Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Giovannetti, who were paying a call on Mr. and Mrs. Diehl, Mrs. Brodie and the Brodies' daughter, Adele, 17.

Delegate Rosenberg Off for Richmond

State Delegate Maurice D. Rosenberg, of Alexandria, Va., left last night for Richmond, where he will attend a meeting of the Virginia General Assembly State auditing committee today. The session was called for the purpose of reviewing the work of the auditing department during the past year.

ment. It is anticipated that the board will begin its meetings next week.

Since Mr. Roosevelt has no advisers here with him, and so far as known received no visitors today, all of his work was done by telephone. He has asked departmental chiefs there to suggest spokesmen for the State, War and Navy Department who will be members of the board.

Reporters traveling with the President received no further light on the proposed operations of the board, beyond the brief description already made public. The President has attached such importance to it, however, as to indicate that its formation predicates a great program involving eventual collaboration extending even as far as industrial controls, since the board will be charged specifically with studying the material problem involved in building up the unprecedented armed services now in the planning stage.

The President will face numerous problems for study when he arrives home, among the most interesting being anticipated reports as to what is involved in Great Britain's agreement in principle to the proposal that it lease base sites to the United States in its Western Hemisphere possessions.

Incidentally, the White House staff here has manifested the President's pleasure at the rather general approval which greeted his Canadian accord.

House Passes Export-Import Bill

Approves Plan for $500,000,000 Loans By 183-144 Vote

By the Associated Press

The House last night, by a vote of 183 to 144, passed the Administration bill authorizing $500,000,000 in Export-Import Bank loans to help in the "orderly marketing" of surplus products of Western Hemisphere nations.

The legislation, still to be acted on by the Senate, also would increase the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by $1,500,000,000.

One-third of this would go to the bank for a revolving fund for loans to Canada and Latin-American nations. The remaining $1,000,000,000 would be used by the RFC for loans to domestic industries for plant expansion to meet defense orders.

Just before the final vote the House defeated, 185 to 140, a move by Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, to return the bill to committee for elimination of the $500,000,000 provision.

Amendments Rejected

Action came after an all-day debate that ran past the dinner hour and saw a long series of restricting amendments rejected by close margins and largely along party lines.

Several Republicans, however, spoke for the bill which President Roosevelt recommended as a means of bolstering economic defenses in Latin America against Nazi penetration.

Republican opponents concentrated their attack on the argument that American industry and agriculture might suffer from helping South America dispose of surpluses that are in competition with products of this country.

They also argued that South American countries had defaulted on more than $1,000,000,000 in dollar bonds floated to private interests in the United States and could not repay further credit.

An attempt by Wolcott to strike out the $500,000,000 bank loan section was defeated 126 to 112.

Other amendments rejected included:

By Wolcott—To deny loans to Canada and other British and French possessions in this hemisphere—by 129 to 99.

By Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota—To require Latin-American borrowers to meet the same wage-hour and acreage reduction requirements imposed on Government borrowers in this country—by 126 to 106.

By Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin—To deny loans to nations in default on debts owed to private citizens in this country—by 125 to 85.

By Wolcott—To strike out the section extending the life of the Export-Import Bank from June 30, 1941, to January 22, 1947, and removing the present limit on bank loans of $20,000,000 to any one country—by 120 to 84.

By Smith (Republican), Ohio—To bar use of funds for purchase of surpluses for the purpose of withholding them from the market or to affect prices—by 113 to 88.

Loans to Governments

Under the bill, loans could be made to governments, their central banks, or other acceptable banking institutions. When guaranteed by foreign governments or banks, loans also could be made to subdivisions or individual citizens of the foreign countries.

The Banking Committee in reporting the measure said the loans would be for assisting "in the development of the resources, the stabilizing of economies and the orderly marketing of the products of Western Hemisphere nations.

Representative Crawford (Republican), of Michigan, made one of the principal arguments for the bill, interpreting it as a step to help Great Britain blockade Europe "until the fighting is over."

He asserted he was not sure his party differed with him but added:

"If it is the position of the Republican Party that it is not going to participate in the handling of the Western Hemisphere, God help this situation if we come in power after January 1, 1940. . . .

"I want to know if we are in position to say to the Latin American countries, 'You can go to Hades, we are not going to do anything in the way of a constructive policy which has to do with a hemispherical defense program. . . .

"Do we mean business, or are we going to demagogue our way through a campaign and kid the people and help send this country itself further to hell? That is what I want to know."

John Bull Shows His Metal

By International News Service

London, Aug. 21.—Possibly in answer to a German radio jibe that Britain is short of metal, British authorities tonight released an imposing photograph of one of the dumps in southeast England where the wreckage of German aircraft is being carted.

The dump covers 20 acres, is 12 feet high, and represents thousands of pounds worth of useful materials for conversion into new parts.

In one special pile were the tails of 87 Messerschmitts, in another a large number of Junkers cockpits.

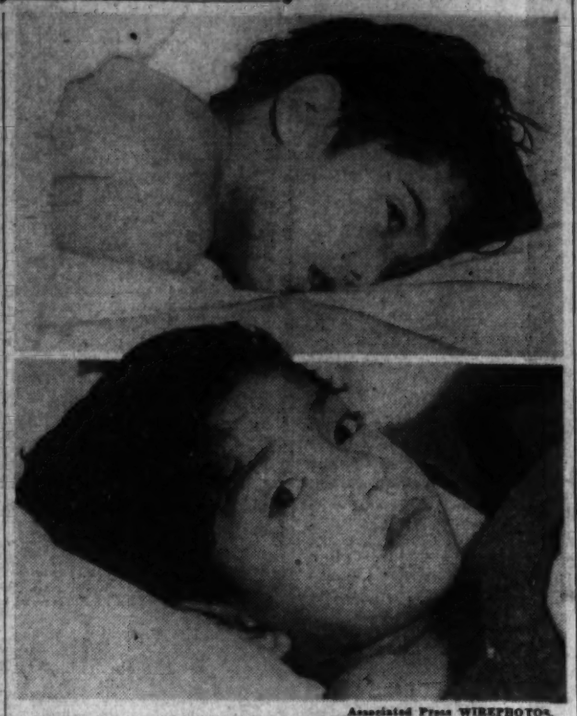
Brotherly Love Is Displayed In Rescue



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

BROTHER RESCUES BROTHER—Vincent Monsano, 7 lower), himself unable to swim, leaped into the Echo Park Lake in Los Angeles yesterday to rescue his brother, Richard, 5 (top). Both were nearly drowned before Vincent could tug Richard to shallow water. "He's my brother and I didn't want to see him die," said Vincent at the hospital, where both were taken was cut on the left shoulder and right leg. Both men were taken to Emergency Hospital by another employe of the office. They were sent home after receiving first aid.

The explosion was heard for ten blocks around the postoffice. The mail bag was blown to bits and a 4-inch hole was torn in cement above the loading platform. Bits of paper and fragments of metal were found 30 feet away.

Inspectors said the bomb was in a pouch of "postage due" mail. Piecing together the particles remaining, they decided the bomb was contained in a cardboard box marked "AGFA Clipper Camera." It was wrapped in heavy brown wrapping paper and was tied with a piece of yellow twine.

The lettering was done with pen and ink very crudely, it was said, and 3 cents postage was due on the package.

Among the fragments gathered up inspectors found two flashlight dry cell batteries, each about 2 inches long. They were connected by wire to a piece of iron pipe about 1½ inches long with about the same diameter. A cap was over one end of the pipe.

Investigators said they believed the bomb to be of the "contact" variety, one that explodes when the package is opened or disturbed. Agitation while moving the bag was blamed for its discharge. No timer was found.

L. J. Carrico, assistant superintendent of the postoffice, was the first official on the scene and took charge until police could throw a cordon aruond the building.

Carrico said the U street station services the territory west of Eleventh street northwest to Rock Creek Park, and north of O street to the 3100 block of Connecticut avenue northwest.

Postmaster Vincent Burke visited the scene with investigators.

Employes of the station said that had the bomb not gone off when it did, it probably would have been carried into a sorting room where between 50 and 60 persons are employed.

Greece and Italy Near Showdown military experts today as Italo-Greek tension rose on reports of Italians mobiled divisions massing along the frontier between Albania and Greece.

An Italian plane was understood to have made a forced landing 15 miles west of Athens, near Greece's largest munitions plant, during the night. The crew of five was interned, bringing to 27 the number of Italian airmen interned in Greece in recent weeks.

Greek staff consultations with Russian military and air attaches in Athens, was considered significant in some quarters.

There have been reports of Greek-Turkish talks since the rise of Italo-Greek tension, as well as reports of Turkish troops moving up to the Thracian frontier with Greece.

Turkey, according to some reports, is seeking to bring Russia into a bloc against any aggression in the Balkans.

Metaxas Relies on Reich

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Aug. 21.—Greek-Italian relations were described by a foreign office official today as follows:

"There are no new developments. The situation remain serious."

Tomorrow's issue of the newspaper Proia will print a dispatch from its Berlin correspondent saying that Germany wants "peace in the Balkans at any price." Premier Metaxas is speculating on the possibility that Germany will keep her southern partner cool.

However, whether as the result of the nervousness stimulated by ten days of Italian agitation or because of the growing belief that serious events are in the offing, Greece is girding herself for trouble.

Col. Donovan Says:

French Debacle Is 5th Column Masterpiece

The following is a condensation of the third of four articles made public by Secretary of the Navy Knox as part of the national defense program. Col. William J. Donovan recently returned from a mission abroad on behalf of Secretary Knox. He wrote these articles in collaboration with Edgar Ansel Mowrer, distinguished foreign correspondent.

The masterpiece of the "Fifth Column" was unquestionably the French debacle. Here everything that Hitler had promised came to pass with almost mathematical precision.

He did not strike until he was in touch with certain important Frenchmen who were ready to treat with him. He needed but one swift blow. He terrified the soldiers by his noise-making engines, he demoralized the officers by the surprise and power of his attacks, he bewildered the generals by the daring of his strategic conceptions, he troubled the entire population by his radio propaganda that insisted that France was being betrayed by Britain and by the French "warmongers." He spread horrible rumors through villages, issued fearsome reports by wireless, and then, when the populations had congested the roads in their flight, machine gunned them to heighten their panic.

Meanwhile his agents within France, presumably by clandestine wireless senders, kept him informed of what was going on, and he could thus choose the precise moment for Italy's entrance into the war when French disarray was at its climax. As a result France was not only beaten far more thoroughly and far more easily than Poland but, unlike Poland, France cracked morally as well, and a new set of leaders sought to purchase the German's mercy, if not his respect, by submission to France's conquerors.

Low Ebb in French History

Admittedly, this could not have been accomplished save during a low ebb in French history. The French masses were increasingly materialistic. Capital and labor were at loggerheads, the former remembering the experiments of the Popular Front government of 1936-37, the latter resentful of the attempted Fascist coup d'etat in 1934 and the unpunished "Cagoulard" Fascist conspiracy later. Moreover, the peculiar French form of parliamentary government was creaking, and the bulk of the people had lost nearly all faith in their leaders. This enabled Hitler (and Mussolini as well) to keep up propaganda pressure, often through the Communists, and prevent the output in the armament industries from ever reaching a satisfactory level.

What happened to the French officers? Simply this: For the most part they ceased to believe in freedom, democracy or any of the slogans which alone could galvanize the entire country.

While not exactly pro-Fascist (and certainly not pro-German), they were hostile to the Third Republic; many had come to believe that an authoritarian regime like that of Italy and Germany was really preferable. It would, they thought, save the position of the privileged classes and really save France from the disagreeable necessity of defending itself. If there was to be a war, then let it be against the Bolsheviks. In other words, at least half and perhaps the majority of influential French citizens had come to believe what Hitler wanted them to believe.

Beautiful Women, Too

How had Hitler accomplished this? By patient activity. For years his agents in France, Friedrich Sieburg, the author; Otto Abetz, "pro-French" consuls like Nolde, many others, had "worked" the French leaders. When necessary they were assisted by beautiful women: The Baroness von Einem, the Princess von Hohenlohe and others of lesser brilliance. They "got in" with certain of those leading French women who, at the moment of defeat, exercised such a devastating influence on certain French statesmen. They went everywhere, saw everybody, came to know everything, dipped into French politics through scandalously venal French newspapers.

To the weak and the cynical they preached defeatism; to the unsuccessful, hatred of the Jew; to all the possibility of living on good terms with Germany, if only France would break relations with the Bolsheviks and "money-minded" Britons, cease meddling in central and eastern Europe and propitiate the Italians by the gift of some "unimportant" French territories.

What of Hitler's "Fifth Column" in Great Britain?

This time the British police were prepared for the war. At the opening of hostilities they jailed some 400 of the best German agents. Later raids tended to show that the backbone of the organization was broken then. The involuntary confinement of over a thousand Britishers, mostly followers of Moseley, further cleared the air.

All in all, foreigners in Britain have the impression that the several branches of the very competent British police are masters of the situation.

Earle Plans Fall Season Of 'Command' Pictures

Stellar Attractions Billed for Two Months; 'March of Time' Takes a Look at Defenses; This, That and the Other About the Theater

EVIDENTLY WEARIED by the task of dreaming up some euphemistic legend to signalize each impending group of superior attractions, the Earle Theater has become a bit mandatory about it and designated its next two months as a "Go-to-the-Earle Festival." There seems to be some justification for the mandate.

BELL

The new 1940-41 season on Thirteenth street—by arbitrary edict, since the Earle operates 52 weeks a year—begins this Friday, with Errol Flynn and a superlative cast in the Warner Brothers new production of Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk," which will be followed by Loretta Young and Melvyn Douglas in "He Stayed for Breakfast," with Sammy Kaye and his "Swing and Sway" Orchestra, with all its radio personalities, comprising the stage attraction.

Following in rapid succession—although whether or not in this precise order, I would not know—will be Cary Grant and Martha Scott in "The Howards of Virginia," briefly celebrated in this space yesterday; Jimmy Stewart, Rosalind Russell and Charlie Ruggles, in S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," which served Katharine Cornell so well on the stage; James Cagney and Ann Sheridan in "City For Conquest"; Jean Arthur and William Holden in "Arizona," by Clarence Budington Kelland, author of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," if you need the reminder; Edward G. Robinson, Edna Best and Eddie Albert in "Dispatch From Reuters"; Pat O'Brien, Gale Page and Ronold Reagan in "Knute Rockne—All-American"; Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall and Gale Sondergaard in W. Somerset Maugham's "The Letter," and Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard and Robert Preston in Cecil B. De Mille's Technicolor saga of the famous Canadian organization, "Northwest Mounted Police."

In earlier and less plastic years, this is what would have been known as "The Greater Movie Season"—with banner-waving, marquee decorations, special trademarks in the ads and everything. Maybe that's what it is, anyway.

Sammy Kaye, recent pinch-hitter for Leonard Lyons in his New Yorker" column on this page, incidentally, is not the only "name" maestro who will be bringing his band to the Earle stage these next few weeks. Also among those present will be Glenn Miller and his "No. 1 Orchestra of the Year," and Jimmy Dorsey and his "contrast music." And there are others, so we are told, still to be announced.

In its next issue, "Gateways to Panama," the shrewdly contrived "March of Time" once again will come pretty close to home. This forthcoming release will afford local picturegoers an opportunity to view today's full story of American defense strategy in the Caribbean. The Panama Canal, all-important short-cut for moving our one-ocean navy between the Atlantic and Pacific—or vice versa, as things stand at the moment—is they key to the entire United States defense program, the "March of Time" will point out. It will picture the steps being taken to strengthen and increase the Canal Zone defenses against attack and sabotage. U. S. Navy bases at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in the Virgin Islands and at Puerto Rico will be shown, within the limits of governmental discretion.

Because they are filming the story of Mrs. Leslie Carter, under the title of "The Lady With Red Hair," the Warner Brothers are in quest of actors to portray such luminaries of the American theater as David Belasco, Charles Frohman, William Faversham, John Drew and numerous others. Whom would you suggest—not for the "numerous others," but for these specifically named?

If you drive a car bearing Nebraska or New Mexico license plates, better hustle out to the Cross Roads Theater and take a lot of wear and tear off the eagle eye of William, the colored parking attendant, janitor and soda pop concessionaire. After four years of checking and double-checking, William is anxious to close his books. Nebraska and New Mexico are the only States not checked off his map of the 48 comprising this glorious Nation of ours. The other 46 are accounted for. If there are any thirsty Nebraskans or New Mexicans in Washington, a free bottle of their favorite flavor of pop is awaiting them for showing up and relieving William's mind.

What's-in-a-Name Note

Perhaps this meager two-State deficiency is what makes the Cross Roads cross!

More Musical Antics Are on Way

MICKEY ROONEY AND JUDY GARLAND encounter new opportunities to display their versatile musical gifts in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming production of "Strike Up the Band," the tuneful comedy of a high school swing orchestra. They seem here to be doing a "double Fritzi Scheff"—if you are able to recall that distinguished prima donna in "Mlle. Modiste"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

I walked on the "Philadelphia Story" set just as they were shooting the last love scene between Katie Hepburn and Jimmy Stewart. I must say they were both in the mood — especially Jimmy, who had suggestions for improvement until they'd taken five takes. After each, he sheepishly exclaimed, "And I'm getting paid for this!" I congratulated him on the improvement of his love technique, and asked him to light my cigarette. His hand shook so he could hardly manage it —and we both yelled.

HOPPER

Then tea was announced. Ever since the start of this picture, Katie's served tea to the entire company and crew, bringing huge cakes from her own house. But before we had it, an electrician stepped forth and handed Katie a package. In two minutes they'd gathered together enough money to buy her a present—a dozen Arden's soap mitts.

They finished the picture 5 days under schedule, and in 18 days less than it took to film "The Women."

Warners won't admit it, but they took time out to locate Errol Flynn. Seems he got absent-minded and disappeared . . . Look for another public reconciliation with Lili.

Charlie Chaplin's no fool. Instead of pressing his suit for $1,000,000 against Life Magazine, he's given them a four-page layout of "The Dictator," which you'll see around the first of September.

Paulette Goddard's new station wagon will be a seven-year-old Rolls with a new body. Babe Hutton's pa, Frank, turned his Rolls into a trunk truck.

Patricia Morison has insured herself for $25,000 for five years against loss of work through marriage. Which certainly proves she's a career woman!

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 21 (INS).—The plastic surgeons have certainly had their innings the last few weeks in Hollywood with the crop of new noses. Milton Berle's proboscis is so successful that he is positively handsome. The whole town is talking about how well he looks. Not only is the town talking, but he got himself a new job at Twentieth Century-Fox—a long-term contract, if you please, on the strength of the new physiognomy (good word?)

PARSONS

Milton will go out on his personal appearances, returning here December 1, when he will be one of the leads in "The Great American Broadcast"—a cavalcade of radio.

While we are on the subject of remade faces, Joan Crawford's next movie is "A Woman's face," the story of a woman who, terribly disfigured, manages to have her beauty restored. Maybe some of you saw the Swedish picture, from which this next Crawford movie has been taken, when it played in your town. Anyhow, M-G-M bought it and are now remaking it with Victor Saville as the director.

I am sorry to hear that Republic is breaking up the long standing team of Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette. Smiley, to me, is one of the funniest comics on the screen and he has helped put Gene Autry on top, but, according to Republic, this is the reason: Gene will be starred in "Melody Ranch," a $200,000 special which Sol C. Siegel will produce. Siegel is afraid that if Smiley and Autry are teamed the paying customers will think it is just another Autry Western, so he is trying to get Jimmy Durante for the comedy spot.

My amateur reviewer, William Simpson, in Pomona, saw "Too Many Girls." Says Bill: "For Le these many months have I been waiting for the right musical. I found it—"Too Many Girls." Though the film is very good throughout, the best spots are certainly the musical numbers—this gives me the cue for special comment on the last number of the film which any reviewer—even we amateurs, could not overlook. It is sort of a Cuban rally and with Desi Arnaz drumming the accompaniment it proves to be one of the best musical sequences since "The Great Ziegfeld."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier plan to be married in Canada on British soil, if it is possible; Mary Cassiday, former Earl Carroll beauty, and Edmund McDonald, of San Francisco, will announce their wedding plans shortly; Hedy Lamarr and John Foster, of the British Embassy, an interesting twosome at "Tonight at 8:30"; Wooly Donahue has not been indifferent to Hedy's charms since he reached here.

Lynn Bari is opening a beauty parlor on the strip and putting Lydia Blythe in charge; Bob Howard's birthday gift to his bride, Andrea Leeds, is a ruby and diamond ring; two big openings, "Ladies in Retirement" and "Tonight at 8:30" had practically every celeb in town in attendance: saw Kitty and Gilbert Miller, Cole Porter with Howard Sturges and George Cukor; Liz Whitney with an unknown escort applauding Flora Robson; Noel Coward with Marlene Dietrich and Dudley Murphy with Katherine Hepburn, a spectacular foursome at "Tonight at 8:30"; the Douglas Fairbanks, jrs., gave a large party in honor of Noel and the members of the cast of the nine plays following the first night. It went on until the sma' hours.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

(BOB CROSBY, orchestra leader, taking over today for Leonard Lyons, who is vacationing.)

THIS IS GOING to be about Dixieland music, golf, Hollywood, trains, fried clams, some very wacky guys, horses and, naturally, Bing. I'm not the expert typewriter jockey that friend Leonard Lyons is, but nobody will ever be able to say that B. C. didn't give the colyumming business a two-fingered try. After all, writing a column can't hold too many terrors for a gee who works with bobcats.

BOB CROSBY

Speaking of bobcats, we had Frank Buck, the famous animal man, as our guest at the Blackhawk in good old Chi one night. That Frank is a solid sender in the circus cage and he cuts a mean rug on the dance floor, too. We put on a little jam session for him and he got off a swiftie that we all thought was a killer. The set came to an end and we were figuring on a little intermission but some of those kids kept clamoring for more music. Frank Buck was in their corner. He hollered, "Hey, hey! Bring 'em back a jive!"

ARTURO GODOY is another fellow who is a pretty good friend of the band. He may not speak English so well but the language of the jitterbug seems to be international. We have a lot of symphony orchestras going down to South America—Toscanini just got back and Stokowski's heading that way and Andre Kostelanetz toured there a couple of seasons ago. But if they've got many more boys like Godoy, it might be a swell idea to send them some of our dance bands, too.

NOW THAT WE'VE wandered into the sports department, a note on pasture pool is inevitable. Don't go away—I'm not going to bore you with the slice-by-slice account of my last 18 holes. But I'd like to make a prediction. The day will come when I shall beat Bing. He has always shot a swell game of golf, but I've got me a tutor now—not to be confused with Muggsy Spanier, the trumpet tooter.

THIS TUTOR of mine is a young fellar named Wilfred Wehrle who has won more amateur golf championships than I could shake a baton at. What I mean is that when he turns in a subpar 68 he writes an apology to go with it. It's a break for me that he happens to be keen on Dixieland music.

WE GOT ACQUAINTED and Wehrle invited me out for a morning round. I've always prided myself on a pretty fair game, but that guy can really shoot. With his help, I think I can get my game in shape to lick the big brother. I've got to beat him at something.

THERE HAS BEEN some talk about our making a picture together. We have some pretty fair muggers among the boys of the band. How could Muggsy Spanier miss with a name like that? And maybe we can get the scenario writer to throw in a scene for our three parody fan dancers, Bob Haggart, Eddie Miller and Nappy La Mare. Ray Bauduc at those drums is a movie all by himself. And so are Jess Stacy's fingers playing leap frog over the blacks-and-whites. And Hank D'Amico who plays a gang of clarinet. And it would take about ten reels to show all the activities of Gil Rodin.

BUT I MUSTN'T LET pride in our outfit run away with me because I want to get in a mention of Hank Greenberg, one of the swellest ball players on the field or off. Only a right guy would do what he did this year—move off first base to try out a new and unfamiliar position in the outfield just to give Rudy York, who can't play anything but first, a chance to perform regularly. But Hank is a real team guy and that move of his may be the thing that gets Detroit into the World Series.

SORRY, but I won't be able to get around to mentioning the horses, fried clams and trains. It's time for us to play the columnist's closing theme, entitled "Out of Space."

Mischa Auer Brightens New 'Sandy' Film

By Richard L. Coe

"SANDY IS A LADY." Universal picturization of a screen play by Charles Grayson with Betty Sandy Eugene Pallette, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, Mischa Auer, Billy Gilbert, Edgar Kennedy, Fritz Feld, Butch and Buddy, Anne Gwynne, Richard Lane and Charles Wilson. Directed by Charles Lamont. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon at the Little Theater.

In an effort to relieve the general gloom of our cataclysmic days, the Little is offering a bill it openly describes as "silly." The Little might well hold up its head and be boastful for the early Harold Lloyd technique of roaming about buildings with 99-out-of-100 chance of slipping to the streets umpteen stories below brings to "Sandy Is a Lady" moments that are uproariously funny. And with Mischa Auer to murmer his irrelevances, the film is on occasion inspiringly demented.

To further the levity of its first-run feature the Little is also presenting Robert Benchley in "See Your Doctor," Mickey Mouse in "Lonesome Ghosts," Popeye the Sailor in "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" and a Pete Smith short, "The Domineering Male."

You recall Sandy in the Bing Crosby picture, "East Side of Heaven." Since then Sandy has had another film, titled after herself, and now this latest, a slight adventure in which she messes up enough people during the day as to bring good luck to them all.

It is with Felix Lobo Smith, a downtrodden inventor conscious of his oppressors, that "Sandy Is a Lady" has its most fun. Tailored to the happy insanities of Mischa Auer, the only trouble with the role is that it is not before the camera the entire film. Just picture Auer as a fellow who thinks he has invented a sure safeguard to steel workers, sure-on shoes, portable parachute et al, and you have a character that you'd like to watch more often. His vis-a-vis in this case is a hard-headed businessman played by Eugene Pallette, no end annoyed by seeing a stranger dangling from his lofty window sill. Says Auer, seeing Sandy, "He'd better have wings."

Billy Gilbert rolls about in his beefy frame to rescue Sandy from her lofty ambulatory and has two boring children to keep her company, musical lads named Butch and Buddy, prodigies on the dull side, but mercifully not too much to the fore. Nan Grey is Sandy's busy mother while the ever-boyish Tom Brown is her earnest papa. There's also Edgar Kennedy as a sorely tried policeman whose day is spent locating a missing baby.

Admittedly "Sandy Is a Lady" is no great shakes at movie-making but since it admits to being silly in the first place, relax and be silly, too. It's easy with Auer around and what's more you'll enjoy yourself.

The latest Universal newsreel suplements that generous assortment of shorts.

CRUISES by moonlight and daylight are scheduled by the S. S. Mount Vernon. Trips down the Potomac to Marshall Hall Amusement Park with hour-and-a-half stopovers at Mount Vernon sail from the Seventh street wharves at 9:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. There are moonlight trips every evening except Mondays and Tuesdays at 8:30, with McWilliams' orchestra aboard for dancing. Kiddies' days every Friday and Monday.

Adventure and Comedy on the Incoming Bills

Three Films Join Trio of Holdovers; Outdoor Amusements

"THE SEA HAWK." Errol Flynn plays the title role in this swashbuckling adventure story of the days of Queen Elizabeth, opening tomorrow morning at the Earle Theater. Berated by the Queen in public for his attack on a Spanish galley, he is commended in private and ordered to continue his daring exploits. Flora Robson is the Queen, while the supporting company includes Brenda Marshall, Claude Rains, Alan Hale, Donald Crisp and Henry Daniell. On the stage, "Polka Dot Revue" features Johnny Barnes, Washington lad who made good in the tap-dancing world; Ben Yost's Singers and the Roxyettes, who will offer a routine that has them dancing on rolling balls.

RKO-Keith's

"LUCKY PARTNERS." Ginger Rogers and Ronald Colman are the stars of this film in which a Greenwich Village girl persuades a strange, handsome artist to become her partner on a sweepstakes ticket. She wants the winnings to marry a stodgy insurance man and the artist willingly complies with her on the condition that since her fiance is unavailable for a platonic, prenuptial honeymoon, she go off with him on the holiday. Of course, their ticket wins. Spring Byington, Jack Carson, Cecelia Loftus, Harry Davenport and Hugh O'Connell have other leads. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"THE GOLDEN FLEECING." In this comedy, Lew Ayres is a timid soul who gets involved in the machinations of a gang of racketeers. He's an insurance salesman (the second such character in the week's new films) who, having sold a huge policy to a top gangster, has to protect his company's investment at the risk of his own life. Virginia Grey, Rita Johnson, Leon Errol, Nat Pendleton and Richard Carle are featured. "Cocktail Time," on the stage features Jean Darling, the original sweetheart of "Our Gang," and Dr. "Think-a-Drink" Hoffman. Steve Evans, impressionist; Nelly Arnaut, and Brothers; the Eight Capitolians and the Rhythm Rookets are the others. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"I LOVE YOU AGAIN." Continuing for a second week on F street, this comedy costars William Powell and Myrna Loy in the riotous adventures of a couple whose marriage is threatened by the husband's attack of amnesia. How he wins back his wife's affections after a nine-year illness had changed him from a bright "con" man into a Boy Ranger leader constitutes the daffy story. Frank McHugh and Edmund Lowe head the cast directed by W. S. Van Dyke 2d.

Metropolitan

"SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS" and a revue of four Disney cartoons, grouped under the general title of a "Walt Disney Festival" will continue for another week. The first of the Disney feature-length films is one of the best-loved films of the screen, while the short subjects are "Ferdinand, the Bull," "The Practical Pig," "Donald's Lucky Day" and "The Ugly Duckling."

Columbia

"PRIDE AND PREJUDICE." After two weeks at the Palace, this screen adaptation of the Jane Austen comedy returns to F street with Greer Garson, Laurence Olivier, Edna May Oliver, Mary Boland, Melville Cooper, Maureen O'Sullivan, Heather Angel, Marsha Hunt, Frieda Inescourt and Bruce Lester in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"IN OLD NEW ORLEANS." A trip through the Louisiana city which many consider our most picturesque is the principal short subject at the newsreel theater for the incoming week. Screen Snapshots No. 10, with Jack Oakie, Basil Rathbone and Jean Arthur on deck; an "Our Gang" comedy titled "Bubbling Troubles," and "Tom Turkey," a color cartoon, are the other brief features. Opens tomorrow morning.

Cross Roads

"THE VINEGAR TREE." Catharine Ryan will star in Paul Osborn's popular comedy for one week only at the Virginia barn theater beginning next Monday evening, playing the role of Mary Boland created in this scatterbrained play, "What A Life!" continues at the Cross Roads through this Saturday evening with Gordon Gray in the lead.

Roadside

"THE VIRGINIAN." Owen Wister's play; which he adapted from his noted novel, continues for another week at the barn theater on the Rockville Pike. A drama of cattle rustlers in the Wyoming Territory of 1887, its company includes Richard Kreuzberg, Harold Stepler, Maccubbin Waters, Lansing Hall, Natalie Core, Ted Projector, Kenn Romney, Keith Adamson, Jean Miller and Herbert Lupton.

Sylvan

"RIP VAN WINKLE." Joseph Jefferson's celebrated stage adaptation of Washington Irving's classic will be played on the grassy stage on the Washington Monument Grounds Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock by the Washington Players and several members of Baltimore's Vagabonds. Harry Welker, former Washington resident and noted for his theatrical activities in this city, has the title role, while the supporting cast includes J. Edmond Veitch, Herman P. Reiss, John Van Sikken, Thomas M. Cahill, S. Carlton Ayers, Wade Robinson and Frances Brunt.

Glen Echo

CHECKING THE BOOKS of the 1940 season to date, the amusement park management has discovered that this has been one of the most successful in the park's 30 years. For reasons, the park points to an ever-increasing desire for "escape" by the public and its own investment of over $100,000 in new equipment at the beginning of the season, improvements which included the installation of two new cafes. Paul Kain plays for dancing in the Spanish Garden ballroom.

210 Young War Refugees Arrive in N. Y.

Children Aboard Samaria Cheer Goddess of Liberty

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 21.—The British liner Samaria docked today bringing to safety from bombarded England the first group of children transported through the collective efforts of Americans.

The young war refugees crowded the Samaria's rails—210 of them of all sizes, dressed in all kinds of clothing—and cheered lustily when they saw the Statue of Liberty in the sunny haze.

Then, a bit anxiously, their eyes searched the docks for a first glimpse of the people who are giving them homes "for the duration."

From all strata of British society, they had one possession in common: a knapsack containing small belongings. Most of the girls had a doll, and many of the boys had school caps which they swung in wild excitement.

They talked on arriving about air raids they'd been through, and bombs they'd seen fall, and Donald Miller, a 5-year-old in Scottish kilts, said, "I'm glad to be here but I miss my daddy."

One-hundred thirty-eight of the children were brought through efforts of the United States Committee for the care of European children, and were met down the bay by Marshall Field, head of the committee.

He had made three trips to the battery and waited three days for the arrival of the ship, which left Liverpool August 9 and traversed the Atlantic, heavily convoyed until last Monday by the British battleship Revenge and three destroyers.

Eighty-four were from homes of workmen in the Hoover Co., Ltd., plant at Pericale, England, a London suburb, traveling to homes of employes of the Hoover Suction Sweeper Co., of North Canton, Ohio.

Fifty were brought under sponsorship of the Boston Transcript, all seemed confident England would win the war.

"Hitler can't get to England," said David Courtenay, 15, of Sussex, one of the group going to Boston. "You should see our defenses."

He had seen a bomb fall 200 yards away from him, killing five persons.

Eleven volunteer "shipboard mothers"—British women who will shuttle across the Atlantic in the coming weeks with groups of children—supervised the 210, with additional volunteer aid of the 477 adult passengers.

170 Arrive in Canal Zone

Copyright by New York Times

Panama, C. Z., Aug. 21.—After escaping a reported attack on the liner Rangitiki, on which they arrived here, 170 British children were the shore guests of the Canal Zone today. Their greatest thrill was seeing the ruins of Old Panama, destroyed in 1671 by the British pirate, Henry Morgan.

The children sail tonight for New Zealand where many of them will live for the duration of the war.

Women Democrats Hear Dr. Crabtree

Public health, generally considered a social objective, becomes a military one in times of stress, Dr. James A. Crabtree, of the U. S. Public Health Service, told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday.

Discussing "Public Health and National Defense," he declared the contribution of the Public Health Service in the field of industrial health, control of tuberculosis, malaria, pneumonia and venereal disease, was of significant value from the point of view of the national defense program.

Open-Air

Bermuda, Aug. 21.—Over 100 censors have arrived from England to strengthen the local censorship staff engaged in the examining of mail—a work increased by the fact that American Export liners are stopping here on their weekly voyages from the United States to Lisbon.

More than 1,000 bags of mail have been taken from two Export liners in the past fortnight.

First Tank Brigade Formed in Canada

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 21.—Canada's first tank brigade has been formed, Defense Minister Ralston announced today. A reserve of four battalions has also been formed and in the near future the brigade will become a division.

To train these troops a special tank has been designed. It is being produced largely from parts now in commercial production for general industry and thus can be turned out much more rapidly than the heavy tanks being made in Canada for active service.

Ralston announced at the same time that the Canadian active service force in Canada now numbered 114,000 with an additional 40,000 men in England. In the nonpermanent in England. In the nonpermanent active militia another 100,000 300,000 men will be given rudimentary training.

$150,000 Sought by Council To Speed Defense Inventions

Organization to Act as Clearing House And Assignment Bureau to Farm Out Unsolved Problems to Scientists

By Edward Ryan

A $150,000 fund is being sought by Commerce officials to start the new formed National Investors' Council on its job of speeding inventions for national defense, officials said yesterday.

The council, headed by D. Charles Kettering, president of the General Motors Research Corporation, plans to build up a staff of about 50 trained engineers, patent investigators, and others, to handle new defense inventions.

Their organization will act both as a clearing house for volunteer inventions, and as an assignment bureau to farm out unsolved defense problems to the Nation's best inventors and research organizations for solutions.

Funds for the agency, officials said, are expected to come either from the Presidents' special emergency defense appropriation, or from Congress.

E. E. Schnellbacher, veteran Commerce Department official, is slated to be made chief of the new reorganized division of commercial intelligence in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, officials said.

He will succeed Frank R. Eldridge, chief of the division for many years, who was reported to have been ousted shortly after he submitted plans for revising the bureau's publication setup.

The publication work has been reorganized to bring under one cover many of the bulletins formerly issued separately by the various sections in the bureau. Title of the new publication will be the Foreign Commerce Weekly, enlarging the old Commerce Reports.

It will be produced by a board of three editors, including Emmett A. Chapman, former section chief in the Chemical Division, who will be industrial editor, and Carter R. Bryan, former European correspondent for American and English papers, who will be international editor. The third member has not yet been appointed.

JOBS—Civil service exams for two key defense jobs will be held open until June 30, 1941, the Civil Service Commission said yesterday.

The openings are for marine engineers, $4,600 and $5,600 a year, and naval architects, $4,600 and $5,600 a year.

Other new examinations include statistical draftsmen, five grades from $1,620 to $2,600 a year; freight, passenger and Pullman rate clerks, $1,800 to $2,300; assistant ethnology curator for the National Museum, $3,200; motion-picture photographers, aerial motion-picture photographers, motion-picture technicians, $1,440 to $2,600.

Spectacles Only Clew to Identity Of Amnesia Victim

Apparently an amnesia victim, a well-dressed, middle-aged man with graying hair was given lodging at the Fairfax (Va.) County Jail last night as police attempted to identify him through a pair of spectacles purchased in Washington.

The man walked up to Town Sergt. Vernon C. Cockerille in Herndon about noon yesterday and told the officer his memory was a blank. He said he vaguely remembered spending several days and nights in the Washington Monument Grounds and walking to Herndon yesterday.

A pair of rimless glasses in a case labeled Edmonds, optician, 915 Fifteenth street northwest, Washington, was his only possession.

'Casey at Bat' Author Dies at 77

Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 21 (AP). Death today struck out Ernest Lawrence Thayer, 77-year-old author of the famous poem "Casey at the Bat."

Dashed off in a couple of hours in 1888, "Casey" first appeared in print in the San Francisco Examiner, where Thayer launched a brief writing career. The poem was his best known contribution.

Later it was made famous by Actor DeWolf Hopper.

Where The Remedy Lies

Washington has experienced several shocks this year. There was, for example, the O street fire which cost the lives of three persons and injuries to five others. In some respects even more disturbing were the findings of the committee of doctors who investigated the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains.

It was not so much the fact that fire had claimed three victims which aroused public indignation in the District last April. Rather it was the facts which came to light as a result of that tragedy. Many Washingtonians then learned for the first time that the District's staff of building inspectors was so inadequate that building regulations and safety rules could not be properly enforced.

Interest in such problems becomes acute when human beings are burned to death for want of adequate inspection of buildings. Too often that interest lags when the routine problem of budgeting funds for the building inspector's office comes up for discussion. Yet, if tragedies are to be prevented in cases of this sort, the remedy must be applied long before flames begin to roar through improperly constructed apartments.

Perhaps the most ironic part of the furor over Blue Plains a few months ago was the fact that the Board of Public Welfare had consistently asked for additional funds to establish what Director Bondy calls "a minimum decency standard." The board's estimates had been repeatedly slashed. Gross neglect was thus added to inefficient management.

Funds are now requested once more for a building to replace the firetrap which serves as administrative quarters, for a nurses' home, a new ward for colored women and repairs to the power plant. This seems to be a modest program considering the long neglect of Blue Plains. Yet it will cost $165,000, and that sum can be secured only through the District budget.

So it is in the budget hearings that the real demand for improvement of various disgraceful local conditions must be centered. Much can be done through better administration, but even good executives must have money for equipment and competent personnel. The story of Blue Plains, of the Children's Receiving Home, of Washington's fire hazards and health conditions should be persuasively repeated for the benefit of the budget-makers.

The Chinese, Too

Today marks the beginning of the third week of Hitler's aerial onslaught on the British Isles.

The fact that, despite the fearful punishment which has been visited on them during the past fortnight, the British have managed to retain their courage and determination has rightly aroused widespread admiration. For it is realized that if the British survive and emerge unconquered from the present battle the light of liberty may be kindled anew in Europe.

While our attention is centered on what is going on in Great Britain, we must not forget what is happening, at the same time, in Asia. There, in the face of even greater handicaps and hardships than those which confront the British, another ancient people is also fighting aggression with might and main. And the Chinese have been doing so for more than three years.

Wednesday saw a lull in the German raids on English centers. That same day saw the sixth raid in 96 hours on Chungking, China's temporary capital. It was the thirtieth raid since last May. Lacking an adequate air force and with only limited air raid defenses to protect the city, the Chinese were in no position to fight back. The result was that hundreds were killed by Japanese bombs and tens of thousands were made homeless.

There was no military excuse for this aerial onslaught. It was purely and simply an act of terrorism. For the Japanese armies are hundreds of miles removed from Chunking. During recent months they have made practically no progress in cutting through the Chinese armies that stand between them and the capital.

Stalemated over a period of many months in the military sphere, with the long-hoped-for victory still as far from their grasp as ever, the Japanese army is manifesting its frustration and wreaking its vengeance on the enemy by wholesale destruction from the air.

Yet the Chinese fight on. When yesterday's raids ended the work of reconstruction was resumed. Such courage and pertinacity are not easily overcome.

The Democratic Way

All prospect that President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie will follow in the tradition of Lincoln and Douglas appears to have been shattered. The Republican challenger wants to meet his opponent in face to face verbal contest. The Democratic incumbent declines. Since two are required to make a debate, the public will doubtless be denied the interesting spectacle suggested by Mr. Willkie.

Probably Mr. Willkie had little hope of inducing the President to meet him on the platform in various parts of the country. Presidents usually stand upon their privilege of keeping opposition candidates at a distance. But such a personal meeting is not at all essential to the type of public debate in which Mr. Willkie seems to be interested.

In renewing his challenge to the President, Mr. Willkie shifted his emphasis from "debate" to "discussion." "I do not believe even the President of the United States has a right to eliminate public discussion or to refrain from engaging in it when seeking public office," the Republican candidate said. "I again invite him to engage in public discussion."

It will be difficult for the President to reject that invitation. Of course, the time he can give to campaigning is limited. In this critical period the President's responsibilities are enormous. In any event, he will have far less time to devote to political discussion than has Mr. Willkie. But the President should never forget that one of his first obligations is to explain his policies and future plans to the people. When he is standing for reelection that task becomes imperative.

After seven years of the New Deal the general principles for which the Administration stands are fairly well known. Its method of approach to most problems can be anticipated by students of government. But the country is now faced by a new crisis which cannot be met by any of the devices to which the Administration gave its chief attention from 1933 to 1939. Ways and means of preparing the Nation for this test must necessarily take first place in the 1940 campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt himself, in his acceptance speech, declared that "very much more remains to be done." The people have a right to know what new policies he has in mind. How does he propose to revitalize our economic system to withstand the shock of totalitarian victories in Europe? How will he meet the fiscal problem which becomes ever more acute?

As Mr. Willkie pointed out, the very fact that President Roosevelt is seeking a third term makes it the more essential for him to justify his stand before the voters. The third-term issue was not disposed of by the President's broadcast to the Chicago convention. It should be thoroughly debated during the campaign, along with other vital issues. If the President fails to take part in that debate, the effect will be to strengthen the dangerous impression that he takes his perpetuation in office for granted.

Greco-Italian Tangle

It is probably more than a coincidence that Italy's victory over Britain in Somaliland has been followed by a revival of Italo-Greek tensions, the reported massing of Italian troops on the Albanian-Greek border and the cancellation by the Greek army of all leaves for officers and men.

The Italian press is hailing Mussolini's achievement in East Africa as the "greatest colonial victory of all time." This is an exaggeration, to say the least. Certainly as long as Great Britain exercises naval supremacy in the Gulf of Aden, the Red Sea and the Mediterranean the strategic advantages which Italy can derive from the capture of British Somaliland are limited.

The prestige aspects of the Italian victory are not to be discounted, however, and the Italians are understandably eager to capitalize the triumph for all it is worth. They would like to persuade the world that what the British insist was merely a pinbrick was actually a fatal blow to Italy's enemy.

Accordingly, they have announced a "total blockade" of British territories in the Mediterranean, even though the Italian fleet has practically been kept in cotton wool since the beginning of Anglo-Italian hostilities. And for the same reason renewed pressure is being applied to force Greece into line with Italian policies.

Thus far the Athens government has shown no willingness to capitulate to Rome. The cancellation of Greek army leaves and the summoning of new classes to the colors suggest, on the contrary, that an Italian attempt to invade Greece will meet with resistance.

Greece alone, with its small and inadequately equipped army, is not likely to be a match for the Italians. But the military balance would not be so heavily weighted against her if she could depend on aid from outside. The British long ago promised that aid and, so long as British naval dominance in the eastern Mediterranean remains, this guarantee is no mere scrap of paper.

There is also a possibility that an Italian attack on Greece would bring Turkey into the war on the side of her Balkan neighbor. Indeed, it was unofficially reported a day or two ago that a concrete pledge of assistance had been made to Greece by the Ankara government.

Whether or not Turkey takes a stand against Italy will probably depend on the attitude of Soviet Russia. While Russia appears to be hostile to Mussolini's efforts to extend Italian influence and holdings in the Balkan peninsula, Moscow's position continues to be veiled in obscurity.

End Of A Revolutionist

We must leave it to the astrologers to say what associations of the stars have made the month of August so fateful in the life of Leon Trotsky. Just 23 years ago, and less than three months before the revolution with whith his name must be forever associated, Trotsky was a prisoner of the provisional government. The sadly harassed Kerenski and the ambitious reactionary Kornilov were jockeying for preponderant power in Russia, and there is little doubt that Trotsky's life hung in the balance.

In the same month of August, 1917, Trotsky became for the first time a member of the Bolshevik organization. Only three years earlier he had been a man without a country. Already an exile from Russia, he was ordered out of Austria-Hungary immediately after the outbreak of the World War. He wandered from city to city of Europe, welcome nowhere. But six months later he found asylum in America.

By August, 1936, the career of Leon Trotsky had turned full cycle. It had meanwhile touched the pinnacle of power and of historical fame. But in that August of 1936 his alleged accomplices in the incredible "Trotskyist plot" were slain in the cellars of the OGPU prisons. Trotsky himself was again an exile and again, in fact if not in name, a prisoner, this time of his unwilling hosts, the Norwegian government. Six months afterward, Trotsky again found refuge in North America.

Now, in the month of August, 1940, Trotsky lies dead in Mexico City, as a result of the brutal blows inflicted on his skull with a pickax. Whether his mysterious assassin is merely an irresponsible fanatic, or, as Trotsky's friends have been quick to assert, an agent of Moscow, is something that we many never know.

Still it would be a great fallacy to reject the suspicion merely on the ground that it is too fantastic to be possible. The fantastic career of Trotsky himself is enough to prove the weird nature of the age in which we live.

Trotsky represented the Western as Stalin represents the Asiatic genius of the Russian revolution. Throughout his brilliant dialectic history of that revolution Trotsky insists upon the parallels to the French revolution of 125 years before. But we do not know whether Trotsky, in the years of his second exile, ever meditated upon the words of that other celebrated revolutionist, whose life and destiny were not wholly dissimilar to his own.

These are the words that Georges Jacques Danton is said to have spoken at the foot of the scaffold:

Better to live and die a poor fisherman than to meddle with the government of men.

Slight Error

It is possible, but not likely, that Great Britain's loss of a sand-swept and barren colony in Somaliland is as important as the Italians say it is. But in their enthusiasm they are conveniently ignoring more than one large chunk of inescapable history.

For instance, the Italian press declares that the British evacuation of Berbera marks "the first time in centuries of history that the British Empire has lost a colony." Tut! Tut! Have the Italians never heard of the United States?

Winetasters' Woe

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The plight of the Bolshevist winetasters is enough to draw tears from the stonliest-hearted citizen. According to Izvestia, the government newspaper in Moscow, the winetasters are under the ominous eye of the OGPU all because they have shown too much enthusiasm for their work.

In capitalistic France, winetasters, dressed in morning suits and top hats, merely roll the sample of wine on their tongues and then spit it out on the ground. It is thus they establish the quality of the wines of Burgundy, the brandies of Charente, the dry vintages of Champagne.

But no thoughtful person would expect such a shoddy, perfunctory performance from an earnest comrade, keyed up by the appeals of Stakhanov and anxious to give his all for state and party. So the Communist winetasters brought to their jobs the intensive application required to determine not only the taste but also the intimate metabolic effects of the beverages—going even to the length of taking a few casks home for nightwork. And for their pains, they are shadowed by the OGPU.

From School To Camp

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me offer a suggestion in connection with military training. Why not take the boys as they are graduated from high school and train them for one year?

They are in the "habit" of learning and would benefit more at this age than several years later. Their future employers would no doubt appreciate the obedience with which these young men would have learned to follow instructions.

Even if they plan to go to college, they should give the year following high school to military training. The military bearing acquired during this year would tend to ward off the ills, real or fancied, caused by long hours of study. They would get more out of college, not in their marks, perhaps, but they would have learned better how to enjoy the association with new classmates.

They could be paid a salary of $25 or $30 a month, the greater part of which could be sent home to help with their future education or to help balance the family budget.

The boys who do not go to high school are another problem. The ones who work on farms could be trained during the winter months for three or four years, until they have received the same training as if they had gone one full year. These winter months are a dull season on the farm, and the change would be welcomed by these future farmers, even though some of them never have to fight.

The town boys who do not attend high school because of economic reasons could be drafted when they become 18 years of age.

Lincoln Sanctuary

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "This country cannot endure half slave and half free." These words were spoken out of the heart of "Honest Abe," than whom a more kindly and noble man never lived. The idea of one-half of his people being committed to slavery grieved him so, that his very body reflected his grieved heart. But his courage to destroy this loathsome condition grew stronger as his grief became more bitter.

One cannot visit the Lincoln Sanctuary, the noblest temple in the world to be dedicated to mortal man, without feeling that he stands in the very presence of Lincoln and his God. HARRY DANIELS.

War, Planning And Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am grateful to Mr. Robert C. Cook for his challenging letter published in your columns on August 17, commenting upon mine of July 23 in the same place. Mr. Cook criticized my remarks on "the end of an epoch" as a dangerous and unsound attack on the democratic ideal.

First, let me say in reply that my letters to the editor of The Post are always written in my personal capacity as a private citizen and student of public affairs and not in my professional capacity as field representative of the National Economic and Social Planning Association. They represent in no way the views of the association.

In the letter under attack I was trying to take a detached, over-all view of the unhappy course of recent events at home and abroad, to explain the long-run sociological trends of our time, and to discern the probable, as distinguished from the desirable, course of future development. I wrote it not as an advocate of the demise of democracy in America, but rather to strengthen the fabric of democracy by calling attention to dangers facing it.

From the tenor of his thoughtful letter I imagine that Mr. Cook and I are in substantial agreement in hoping to preserve and extend American democracy and in believing that wise planning can contribute to this end. I fully subscribe to his definition of the purpose of a planning group:

> The purpose of an organization devoted to social planning should be to forecast trends, to consider possible alternatives and to evolve effective ways to do something about guiding society toward that better and more abundant life which is the dream of all men of good will.

While the process of empirical collectivism in a mixed economy cannot be reduced to the clear-cut lines of a blueprint, my own bill of particulars for defending democracy and making it work includes the following:

1. The threat of total war by a Germany aiming at world supremacy requires total defense, which means the total mobilization of our military, economic and moral resources. In this task I doubt that the economic calculations of private enterprise will prove compatible with the requirements of a war economy.

2. We must streamline our Government and put a sustaining economy beneath our political structure if the America of tomorrow is to remain democratic. We can expand output and create an America unlimited by making the fullest possible use of our human material resources consistent with the need for prudent conservation. This can be done by adopting appropriate policies on the financial, investment, production and antimonopoly levels.

3. In the development of the defense program, the economic and social gains of recent years should not be sacrificed, but should be preserved and strengthened, for they are an essential part of the sinews of total defense.

4. There must be national power to prescribe positive remedies for national problems. This implies extending Government control over the machinery of investment and credit, the management of basic industries, the distribution of the labor force and the direction of foreign trade.

5. We should not allow the war to dislocate our economy or deplete our strategic and irreplaceable natural resources. This requires national economic planning here at home, the development of domestic markets and the curtailment of our exports to meet the requirements of our own national defense program. But we should give Great Britain limited access to our raw materials, foodstuffs and airplanes, for she is fighting to destroy the international aspects of Hitlerism, whose triumph in Europe would jeopardize American security and civilization.

6. We must avoid military involvement in the European war because our participation might bring a military dictatorship here and with it the eclipse of democracy.

7. We should democratize the government of industry and labor by giving all interested groups a voice in the making of their policies.

In these and other ways I believe we must plan our Government, economy and society if free institutions and human values are to be preserved anywhere in the Western world. GEORGE E. GALLOWAY.

Washington, Aug. 18.

Poll On The Draft?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is no denying the Nation-wide interest in the conscription measure being considered by Congress. Those who contend for conscription are in most cases as positive that they are right as are those who are opposed to the measure. Some of the former, especially among the column writers, feel certain that the opposition is most due to misunderstanding, inferring, of course, that they themselves have real understanding thereon.

The question has never been properly brought before the American public, in my opinion. The Gallup Poll, which more closely approached that venture, is, after all, a private enterprise and should not be allowed to assume prominence to the degree that it will be finally considered as the correct American medium to determine public will.

So that each and every American might be afforded due opportunity to express his convictions on this tremendously important consideration of change in traditionally American procedure, it is suggested that the proper medium for a national survey on public opinion is a proposal to the States for amendment to the Constitution. The proposal would, of course, contain all the boundaries of authority and restrictions needed to assure against abuse or misuse of the conscripted and a time limit could be fixed for completion of voting thereon.

Meanwhile, if Congress is sufficiently convinced by the presentations of our military, naval and other national leaders that there is real and close threats to the well-being of this Nation, its possessions and neighbors of this hemisphere, there appears to be no legal barrier to alteration of military and naval legislation to make the services even more attractive to prospective volunteers. JOHN ALDEN.

Washington, Aug. 16.

What Is Freedom?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Westbrook Pegler in his Post column of August 9 set me straight on one matter. I always figured that if youth and labor had to be yanked out of their customary habits to man the Army, businessmen ought to equip them at cost or maybe a little loss. When business demanded full protection for its capital, and a profit to boot, I got to thinking that maybe they might be a little shy of the old team spirit.

It looked to me as if conscription of wealth might be "Fair Enough," but I see now I was wrong. "Men are conscripted to defend the wealth of a country," says Mr. Pegler, "because the life and freedom of the people are based on that wealth," when "most of it is privately owned and shifted from one possessor to another." I always thought freedom was a spiritual feeling like love or a revival meeting or at least a legal something which the Constitution says we all have. Now I see it is nothing but a high-toned way of expressing fondness for a big bank account and the right to put up "No Trespass" signs on a lot of real estate.

Mr. Pegler has shown up this fussing about who is to be conscripted as a lot of tripe. The problem is simple. If freedom is what we are fighting for and freedom is in proportion to one's credit rating, then those who have the most freedom should do the most fighting to protect it. This would mean that an Army would be conscripted and duties assigned on the basis of balance sheets.

The most dirty and dangerous military duties would go to the millionaires. They would be in the listening posts, riding the seas in "tin cans" and doing other jobs noted for blood and lice. The less his income the further from the actual fighting a man ought to be. The unemployed would be allowed to stay home to head relief committees and make patriotic speeches urging all the wealthy to protect their precious heritage. GIBBS J. WINSLOW.

Cat Tales

THE BACK YARD is my solace in this war-torn world. I spend hours in it stretched out on an old beach chair. In the spring I rejoice at the sight of the tiny green shoots breaking through the winter-hardened ground. In the autumn I sorrow when the northern November wind sticks its face into the maple tree and blows the yellow-gold leaves swirling in all directions. And all year round I enjoy the company of the silent-footed cats, who appear suddenly on the fence, eye me for a moment, and then jump easily and noiselessly to the ground to begin their visit with me.

Here, I've seen cats of all kinds and colors and including that mottled species which looks as if it had fallen into a concoction mixed by children in the cans a painter leaves behind. I've known snarling, mean and sneaky cats, who would think nothing of choking their grandmothers for a fish bone, and I've met cats with dispositions like April flowers. Yet every one of them was different from all others; each was a personality in itself. But of all the cats I have known, only Celia and Joe became my especially good friends.

I did not meet Celia under auspicious circumstances. Her mewing had awakened me at an early hour, and I lay in bed unable to sleep again, yet too much annoyed to get up to see what was going on. In the morning of that January day I opened the door and walked out into the yard. On the window sill I found a kitten, surely not more than a month old, which was shivering and mewing with hunger. I fed it some milk and put a small piece of liverwurst near it, hoping that would tide her over until I came home from work.

That evening I gave her more food, and built a place for her with a paper carton which the grocer on the corner let me have. I lined it with an old sweater that had been lying around for a long while.

The winter passed, and Celia, whom I had named after Rosalind's friend in "As You Like It," thrived. I should say that she blossomed. Her rich black fur was touched with just enough orange to give her an exotic appearance, and her eyes, curiously enough, seemed to me to be dark eyes.

She was a sensitive kitten, extremely gentle in her ways. I used to watch with endless pleasure her romps in the grass. As a rule, she never strayed from our back yard. But, later, when she began to do so, I had only to raise my voice to call "Celia," and in a moment I would see her on a fence about four back yards away. She would glance around to see where I was, then jump down, and in a moment she was on the next fence, looking to see if I were still there.

Only once did she do anything which displeased me. After she was a mother, she killed a sparrow, and brought it with gentle purring to her kittens. I picked up a stick and whacked her with it. She dropped the bird, and I buried it. Celia sat on the fence looking at me in what must have been mortification, for she did not try to dig up the bird, nor did I ever see her attempt to kill another.

I don't know where Celia is now. She disappeared one day. I climbed the fence and called her, but she never returned.

Joe, her son, is an altogether different personality. Whereas Celia was beautiful, he is ugly. His fur is drab gray and his eyes were crossed when he was a baby. Celia was gay with intensity. Joe is happy, with a kind of slow good humor.

His disposition, however, is like his mother's. Once a young female was sunning herself in the yard. She lay on her back and began to roll happily from one side to the other. A large tawny male appeared on the fence, and made a snarling dive for her. A noisy struggle began in which she clawed him so that he fled. Joe appeared, and in a friendly manner approached her. Her back rose, and she made a low moaning noise. Joe's answer was to lie down and fall over on his side. The lady soon joined him. His good intentions had conquered the day.

Joe's language is interesting. I've never heard him say "Meow." He uses three or four key sounds in various intonations, in a manner not unlike the Chinese, to say what he wants. For example, when he calls someone by name, he says, "Nyaow." For food he says "Mraow," or "Braow," according to what he wants to eat. If satisfied, he says "Brrrf."

Whereas Celia never left the back yards, Joe's curiosity takes him to strange places. Once he strayed into a Government building. That night the guard, hearing some strange noises, called the police. They located Joe not in but on top of an elevator. How he got there I don't know. He was returned to me only because a friend of mine passed by who knew Joe and his propensity for adventure. After that Joe tamed down a bit. Now he confines his journeys to the front doorstep where he sits watching the automobiles whiz by.

But Joe and his mother are not the only cats that I can tell stories about. There are many cats roaming through the back yards of Washington who are extremely interesting to know. One meets lady and gentlemen cats, tough-guy cats, sailor and soldier cats, racketeers, spies, extortionists, nonentities, wise guys and a host of others. One has only to show a certain degree of courtesy in order to make their acquaintance.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Great Precedent

THE NEGOTIATIONS now under way between the British Empire and the United States demonstrate how permanent and continuous, in spite of changing circumstances, are the fundamental lines of American foreign policy. To those who have forgotten or have never learned the tradition in which American foreign policy was formed, it may seem novel and therefore surprising for the United States to negotiate an understanding with Britain in the midst of a great imperialistic revolutionary and imperial war. But as a matter of historic fact the basic foreign policy of the United States, which gave this hemisphere a century of security, independence, and freedom, was shaped by just such understandings with Great Britain during the great wars of Napoleon and the threatened wars of the despotic Holy Alliance.

Jefferson, Madison and Monroe would have recognized these negotiations as a continuation of their own, as dictated by the same necessity, as actuated by the same vital interests, as inspired by the same instinct of self-preservation. The negotiations between Jefferson and the government of Pitt which preceded the Louisiana Purchase and the negotiations between Monroe and Canning which led to the Monroe Doctrine were two decisive chapters in the same story which is now continued in the negotiations between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill.

The analogy is not apparent and superficial. It is real and it is organic. The foundations of our foreign policy were laid by necessity in the tremendous upheaval of the Napoleonic era. That same foreign policy is being developed by necessity in the tremendous upheaval of our own era.

ON FEBRUARY 15, 1798, while Great Britain was at war with the revolutionary imperialism of Napoleon Bonaparte, the American minister in London had a conversation with Lord Grenville in which he learned that Napoleon might obtain control of Spain, and through Spain of "the resources of South America." Shortly afterwards it was learned that Spain had secretly ceded to Napoleon the great region of the Mississippi Valley known as Louisiana. When Jefferson became President he took the position that while the United States could tolerate Spanish possession of this territory because Spain was "feeble" and "pacific," it could not tolerate its possession by Napoleonic France because of "the impetuosity of her temper, the energy and restlessness of her character."

He then went on to say that "the day that France takes possession of New Orleans fixes the sentence which is to retain her forever within her low-water mark. It seals the union of the two nations who, in conjunction, can maintain exclusive possession of the ocean. From that moment we must marry ourselves to the British fleet and nation . . . This is not a state of things we seek or desire. It is one which this measure, if adopted by France, forces on us as necessarily as any other cause, by the laws of nature, brings on its necessary effect."

The Louisiana crisis was settled by purchase and not by war. It was settled that way because Napoleon lost command of the seas and could not, therefore, maintain his empire in this hemisphere. But Jefferson, unlike the latter-day isolationists who cite his words without studying his acts, had no illusions on three fundamental points. The first was that revolutionary imperialism must not be allowed to establish itself on this side of the Atlantic. The second was that this could be prevented only by Anglo-American control of the ocean. The third was that to preserve that "exclusive possession of the ocean" he would, if necessary, "marry ourselves to the British fleet and nation." Jefferson took this position on April 18, 1802; 13 months earlier in his first inaugural he had coined the historic phrase warning us against "entangling alliances."

It is evident that in his mind an understanding with Great Britain for the joint control of the Atlantic Ocean was not an entanglement but the very basic condition of American security. So what Mr. Willkie said at Elwood about our relations with Britain and what Mr. Roosevelt is doing in his negotiations with Mr. Churchill is in the direct line of descent from the founders of American independence.

THAT JEFFERSON'S views about Anglo-American relations at the time of the Louisiana Purchase were no passing notion is clear from the fact that twenty years later, in the crisis which led to the announcement of the Monroe Doctrine, he repeated them no less emphatically.

In 1823 the continent of Europe was in the grip of four despotic monarchies bound together in the so-called Holy Alliance. They turned their eyes to this hemisphere: the Russian Empire began to move down the west coast from its base in Alaska; the other European despotisms began to formulate plans to reconquer Spanish-America which had rebelled and become independent. Again as in the case of Louisiana twenty-five years earlier, Great Britain and the United States began to negotiate, and in these negotiations between Canning and our minister in London, Benjamin Rush, an agreement was reached to forbid, if necessary by war, the conquest of Spanish America. The agreement was reached in London on August 23, 1823, and the papers were received in Washington by Secretary Adams and President Monroe on October 9, 1823. A week later the President sent the papers to Jefferson asking his advice.

WITHIN A WEEK Jefferson replied urging acceptance and said that while "Europe is laboring to become the domicile of despotism, our endeavor should surely be, to make our hemisphere that of freedom. One nation, most of all, could disturb us in this pursuit; she now offers to lead, aid, and accompany us in it. By acceding to her proposition, we detach her from the bands, bring her mighty weight into the scale of free government, and emancipate a continent at one stroke, which might otherwise linger long in doubt and difficulty. Great Britain is the nation which can do us the most harm of any one, or all on earth; and with her on our side we need not fear the whole world. With her, then, we should most seduously cherish a cordial friendship; and nothing would tend more to knit our affections than to be fighting once more, side by side, in the same cause. Not that I would purchase even her amity at the price of taking part in her wars.

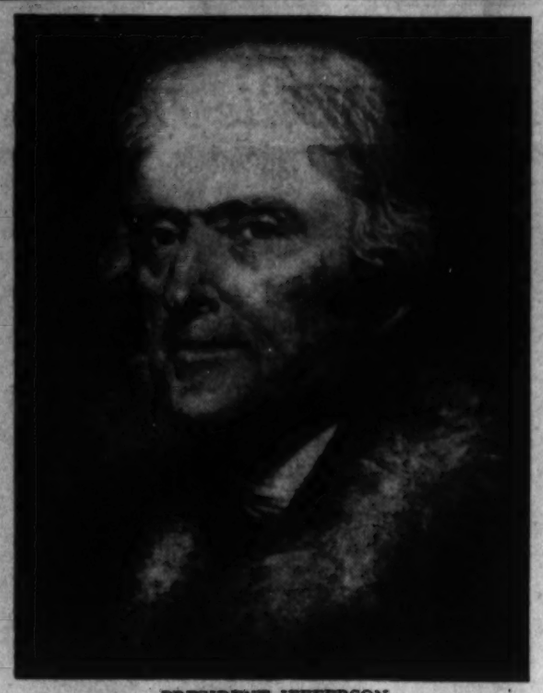
"But the war in which the present proposition might engage us, should that be its consequence, is not her war, but ours. Its object is to introduce and establish the American system, of keeping out of our land all foreign powers—of never permitting those of Europe to intermeddle with the affairs of our nations. It is to maintain our own principle, not to depart from it. And if, to facilitate this, we can effect a division in the body of the European powers, and draw over to our side its most powerful member, surely we should do it. But I am clearly of Mr. Canning's opinion, that it will prevent instead of provoking war. With Great Britain withdrawn from their scale and shifted into that of our two continents, all Europe combined would not undertake such a war, for how would they propose to get at either enemy without superior fleets? Nor is the occasion to be slighted which this proposition offers of declaring our protest against the atrocious violations of the rights of nations by the interference of any one in the internal affairs of another, so flagitiously begun by Bonaparte, and now continued by the equally lawless alliance calling itself holy."

AT PRESIDENT MONROE'S request, Jefferson sent the papers to Madison who replied on November 1, saying,

"I return the letter of the President. The correspondence from abroad has gone back to him, as you desired. I have expressed to him my concurrence in the policy of meeting the advances of the British Government, having an eye to the forms of our Constitution in every step in the road to war. With the British power and navy combined with our own, we have nothing to fear from the rest of the world; and in the great struggle of the epoch between liberty and despotism, we owe it to ourselves to sustain the former, in this hemisphere at least."

It was after this consultation by the most eminent living Americans, themselves the founders of the Republic, that the Monroe Doctrine was promulgated one month later in the form, be it noted, not of a treaty but of a Presidential declaration. Yet there are men today who dare to charge that a negotiation based upon recognition of the vital connection between American security and British sea power is "un-American."

BUT MR. ROOSEVELT need have no doubts and Mr. Willkie need have no doubts that they are walking on the main highway of American foreign policy and that they are following the greatest precedents of American history.



PRESIDENT JEFFERSON
Mr. Lippmann finds in Mr. Jefferson's negotiations with Napoleon for the Louisiana Purchase an "organic analogy" to the current negotiations of the United States with Great Britain

What Of Tomorrow?

By Mark Sullivan

Reply to Lippmann's Draft Plea

MR. WALTER LIPPMANN desires conscription, desires it strongly, is impatient with any who oppose it or doubt it. Mr. Mark Sullivan, on the other hand, while not utterly opposing conscription, deplores it, prefers voluntary enlistment, and thinks the voluntary method should be given further trial.

Consequently, Mr. Lippmann engages in argument with Mr. Sullivan. Mr. Lippmann says:

"Under the 'voluntary' system . . . there would go an ingratiating campaign to pin white feathers on young men who did not volunteer, and the young ladies would be incited to call them slackers. . . . Every young man would feel himself persecuted by the community. The voluntary system sounds well. In practice it is a moral horror. For under this system every young man who is not in uniform will be suspect wherever he goes.

". . . The voluntary system is not voluntary. It is in practice the worst form of compulsion, since the compulsion is not the legal and open and orderly action of the state, but the indirect, undiscerning cruelty of private busy-bodies and self-appointed persecuting patrioteers."

NOW, IF MR. LIPPMANN can say, as he does say, that "the voluntary system is not voluntary," then, of course, he wins the argument. It's the easiest way for winning an argument ever invented. Socrates must wish he had thought of it. If you can say "black is not black," you can prove anything—and then turn around and disprove the same thing. You can prove that Mr. Walter Lippmann is not Mr. Walter Lippmann at all—he is Miss Dorothy Thompson. And you can prove that Mr. Mark Sullivan is not Mr. Mark Sullivan—he is Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. (Which conclusion, I imagine, would be deplored by both the parties concerned.)

Again, Mr. Lippmann uses the word "compulsion" to cover two different things, two opposite things. He says, the "voluntary enlistment" system is really compulsion; he says it is the same kind of compulsion as that which officially goes by the name of compulsion, the "compulsory service" system.

Now let us get these definitions straight:

"Voluntary enlistment" is when you go up to a recruiting sergeant and say, "Hey, buddy; I'd like to enlist."

"COMPULSORY service" is when an official of Government comes into your home and says, in effect, "You have got to go into the army." That is what the compulsory system is, and what it was in 1917—no matter how diplomatically they color it with nice words, such as "selective service," and no matter how benignly they soften the process by setting up local boards of neighbors to make the actual selection of those who must serve. This system of local boards is genuinely well intended and wise. It avoids an Army officer actually coming into the citizen's home and saying "come." But no matter what the softening and the circumlocution, it comes down to the same thing. Always, it must be an official of Government, bearing a formal commission from the Government, who tells the citizen he must come. Always, if the citizen does not obey the command to come, he will be taken by force, and will be put in jail for not obeying. That is what the compulsory system is.

When Mr. Lippmann uses the same one word for this form of compulsion and for the voluntary enlistment form, when he says that compulsion by a Government official is no worse than compulsion by a young lady who pins a white feather on you—when Mr. Lippmann says that, he is using words in a way that simply does not make sense.

RESISTING the young lady can do no worse than land you in the lady's doghouse. Resisting a Government official lands you in the hoosegow. From the doghouse, you can, with a little ingratiation, talk yourself out. But you can't talk yourself out of a Government prison. When Mr. Lippmann says the doghouse is as bad as the calaboose, one can only conclude, to his credit, that he has had no experience with either.

Now if all this were merely facetious retort to Mr. Lippmann it would not be worth while—there are serious matters afoot in the world. But what is here discussed is the very heart of the world's present struggle. The reader who has grasped the distinction between "voluntary" and "compulsory" has progressed a long way toward understanding the struggle. Totalitarian government—naziism, fascism, communism—is that which compels the citizens to obey, in practically all areas of life. Free government is that in which the citizen has the largest practicable area of voluntary action. Between these two ideals is the world's present strife.

THE DISTINCTION has application to America's domestic controversy. Mr. Henry Wallace, honest-minded, admits that the new deal tends to regiment American life, to put compulsion on the citizen, to oppress him. Then Mr. Wallace adds, in defense, that already the citizen was being oppressed by corporations, employers and the like.

But, remember this eternally: The everlasting distinction between compulsion by Government and compulsion by any other agency, is that only Government has the authority to put you in jail or take your life. To extend Government into areas not essentially governmental is to increase dangerously the power of Government to oppress.

Probably we shall have to adopt conscription. Free nations often must, just to defend their freedom. But we should adopt it knowing just exactly what we do, and guarding against its dangers.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

It's Bound To Come

I

Some day—it may be after many years
Or on a day that may come fairly soon—
The killers who now strut this bleeding earth
Will change expression, play a different tune;
The gloating mood, the manner tough will pass—
There'll be a change in all those ruthless airs,
And as an ebb tide gathers flow and speed
They'll suddenly perceive they're "getting theirs."

II

Some day—perhaps in generations yet to come,
Perhaps within a season or a year—
The ruthless ones who stalk a planet now
Shall know the coming of a gripping fear;
The glorifiers of the sword and bomb,
The conquerors with leering, hateful stares
Shall swiftly lose that arrogance and lust—
And sense the time has come for "getting theirs."

III

Some day—no one can estimate the time—
The blood and iron men will know a fail;
The breakers of all covenants and pacts
Will struggle vainly, backs against the wall . . .
The ruthless preachers of a total war
Will know the stiffest backbone has a bend
And realize as skies turn red again
That they at last are "on the other end."

IV

One day—as certain as the seasons shift,
As certain as the change from night to day—
Those who defile the codes of gallantry
Shall sense a swift tide turn the other way;
Those who have law and order on the spot,
On whose ears every decent plea falls flat,
Shall pale and tremble as they realize

V

In time—it may be months or years long hence—
The scoffers at all things called civilized,
The swaggers, the gangsters of the earth
By whom no Christian creed or way is prized,
Shall of a sudden know a time of dread
And sense their braggadocio worn thin
As they perceive, as war lords have before,
That now their kind must "take it on the chin."

VI

Perhaps while we're yet young, or when we're old,
The mad ones who would crush a world by force
And tramp with hobnailed boots upon the weak
And know no pity, feel no slight remorse,
Shall quite abruptly sense a cold, bleak wind
And feel a presense that they cannot see
And to the ghostly, "Now's your turn to pay,"
Trun pale and gasp in choking tones, "Who? Me!"

Poker Politics

Mr. Willkie, resorting to the vernacular of draw poker, says the New Deal has been employing an "I pass" policy. And playing with deuces wild, would he say?

But that isn't this column's impression. It thinks that instead of ever passing when anybody raised the ante fifty cents, the New Deal has blithely chirped, "I raise that fifty billion," and simply laughed at all protests that there was a dollar limit.

Fair Enough

'I Can Lick Ickes'

WHEN I WAS WRITING sport back in the era of wonderful nonsense we had a muscle-bound middleweight with a nose like a summer squash who called himself Johnny Wilson and who couldn't lick anybody but the champion of the world. He admitted that he wasn't much good, but he insisted that there was one guy that he could lick, anywhere, any time.

"I may be a lousy fighter," he used to say, "but I can lick Mike O'Dowd," and the fact of the matter is that he was and he could.

That is the way I feel about Harold Ickes.

I may not be so hot when you put me in with some of those main-event ideology blokes and fancy-Dan economists, but give me Ickes any time. He was made for me. Santa Claus brought him for me. In this world every guy has a sign on at least one other guy, and Harold Ickes is my guy.

I murdered him out in Chicago during the Democratic Convention when the party of Roosevelt and humanity renominated the great indispensable under the social and political auspices of a gang of political porch-climbers and who else but Harold the pure in heart? It was like catching a parson in a raid and hearing the parson explain that, believe it or not, he was just waiting for a streetcar.

HERE WAS the great reformer messing around, and even getting his picture taken, with Ed Kelly, the mayor, whom he himself had denounced as a gang politician of the worst type and against whom he had been of more than half a mind to run for mayor, in a noble sacrifice to save Chicago from a fate which is worse than death.

Mr. Ickes and Harry Hopkins, another sanctimonious devil-chaser, went out to handle the job for the party of humanity, and not only got caught with Kelly and his mob but with Frank Hague, of Jersey City, and, what's more, somebody snapped Harold's picture with them.

Harold's weakness is his own kind of stuff. He likes to rip and tear and try to pull your arms off, and if you stand back and try to box him fancy he will knock your head through the skylight. But tear into him before he can get out of his corner and bat him a couple, then pull him and bull him around a little, and he will start to look for that gate, yelling "foul!" I know my guy from experience.

I DON'T WISH I was running for President, but I tell you one thing—if I were I couldn't ask for sweeter luck than to have them send Ickes after me. Inside of a week you would read that Mr. Ickes had been compelled to drop out of the campaign and put himself away in the United States Naval Hospital in Washington, his favorite rest cure, at $3.25 a day.

I wouldn't quit reminding the citizens that Mr. Ickes is so cheap that when he gets sick or wants a rest he muscles into the Naval Hospital, where he has no legal right to put himself, not merely because he considers himself too good and precious to take a chance in the regular civilian hospital in Washington, as the taxpayers must, but because the service is practically free.

When he pulled that crack on Wendell Willkie about how Willkie made his money and about his residence on Fifth avenue, I wanted to ask, and now I do ask, how Ickes first got into the chips and how he compares his own residence in the dude country north of Chicago, where he has lived much longer than Willkie has lived on Fifth avenue, and his present country mansion outside Washington, with Willkie's Fifth avenue apartment. Go ahead, Harold; give us a tell.

A LONG TIME ago my guy Harold got fresh. He said I had been a sports writer and that, after all, what could one expect? Do you know the answer to that? The answer is that he was a sports writer himself under the same boss in Chicago years ago, but such a punk that he never made the grade, whereas, anyway, I was a major leaguer for 15 years and quit of my own accord.

Yes, chums, I may be a bum, but I can lick Harold Ickes. And you can throw in that Charlie Michelson, too. There is another one I can lick. That kind were made for me.

Utility Firm Sues Former Officers Over 'Slush Fund'

St. Louis, Aug. 21 (AP).—Recovery of an alleged political slush fund "in excess of $400,000" is sought in a suit filed by the Union Electric Co. of Missouri against four of its former major executives.

Asserting the money was paid out without its knowledge, the company, in its petition filed yesterday, named Louis H. Egan, former president; Frank J. Boehm, one-time $45,000-a-year executive vice president; Albert C. Laun, lobbyist, and Oscar F. Funk, ousted comptroller.

"Funk, who was dismissed June 3, 1938, when Egan was president, recently filed suit for $300,000 damages against Egan, Boehm and Union Electric, alleging he was wrongfully forced to resign because he was unwilling to continue improper practices.

Here's News! Jelleff's

Washington, Aug. 22.

Have you noticed how the leaves are beginning to sift from the trees? . . . Do you realize that the last leaf of Summer will shortly slip off the calendar? . . . All we needed was a cool day or two to make us sit up and take notice of the outdoor and the indoor-at-Jelleff's autumn signs. So many fascinating things arrived and "brewing" . . . Come, have a look around with us!

Fed up with fumbling for telephone nickels, tokens and dimes? Here's a neat trick in a new Handbag called REDI-COIN. Without opening your purse, simply press the lever, out pops your coin. Suede or Calf, $5.

Wooden Jewelry for Tweeds, very exciting and novel, perfect, too, with the new feather-light wool frocks, the velveteens and Corduroys, the pampered fabrics of fashion this fall. Hand carved link Necklaces, $1 and $1.95; Bracelets, $1.

Now you can have Nylon Corsets. Modern magic, indeed, giving you new slimming smoothness, new comfort and control. The panels are of Nylon woven with power Lastex and you'd be surprised how slimming they can be. Girdle, $7.50, Foundation, $10—both by Hickory.

Looks like glass, stretches like elastic, what is it? Answer: it is "Vinylite" . . . a revolutionary new plastic shoe material . . . light, satin-soft, crystal clear . . . a product of the Carbine and Carbon Chemicals Corporation. Vinylite shoes are coming to Jelleff's. Soon!

What in the world is "NAPTHALATED"? The story in a nutshell is that the wool in new Fall Nelly Don frocks has been cleansed by Naptha . . . a treatment so gentle that it preserves the strength, life, and resiliency of wool fibres. There's a Nelly Don jersey dress, 100% Napthalated wool, in dusky green with glowing moonstone-like buttons. You'll adore it! $7.95.

Bleach Blue Prints For Use in Dresses

HUGH KEISER, president of Self-Help Exchange, displays blue print before being chemically treated. Mrs. Jessie A. Hover, sewing director, holds white linen that was blue print

Blueprints go into Self-Help Exchange and come out as white dresses. More than 50 pounds of linen blueprints, just given to the exchange by Mrs. Nathan Frank, will be so utilized for making clothing.

Seeing the possibilities in the discarded prints, Mrs. Frank sent them to the Self-Help. There Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, executive director, had some of them sent to the laundry at the N street plant, soaked overnight and washed. They came out white—350 in the first batch, a small proportion of the whole donation.

Mrs. Jessie Hover, supervisor of the sewing room, began work on them and made a shirt waist, a child's dress, men's handkerchiefs and a baby dress. There will be sewing for many hands in her department for some weeks. The women have been asked for suggestions as to other articles into which the squares of cloth can be made. One suggestion was tops for little boys' suits and another was pillow cases. Patterns must be cut to fit the material.

Many little dresses will be ready when school opens. If plans go well, some will be smocked in colored yarns and others will be dyed bright shades or trimmed in colors. The dying also will be done in the Self-Help Laundry.

Fist-Shaking Mothers Hang Pepper's Effigy On Capitol Maple While He Sits in Senate

THE "HANGING" ON CAPITOL HILL—FIRST IN HISTORY Associated Press Photo

Two hundred shouting, fist-shaking, middle-aged women hanged, then kicked and dragged an overall-clad effigy labeled "Claude 'Benedict Arnold' Pepper" on the Capitol lawn yesterday in a demonstration against war and conscription.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, a leading advocate of aid to Britain and compulsory military training, sat silently in his Senate seat while the women—who said they represented the Congress of American Mothers—marched on the Capitol grounds, singing:

"We'll hang Claude Pepper on a sour apple tree,

"So that our boys may be saved."

A maple tree served as gallows for the paper-stuffed, cocoanut-faced dummy, which was surrounded rapidly by hundreds of tourists.

It was the first time in Washington history that an effigy had been hanged on Capitol Hill, according to Senate Sergeant at Arms Chesley W. Jurney.

A Capitol policeman, who produced a knife, finally prevailed upon Mrs. W. H. Firlie, of Pittsburgh, to cut down the figure. Then, the women dragged the dummy around the grounds, chanting their song as they kicked and stomped on the effigy.

Out of the crowd edged an unidentified man who observed:

"This surely is an un-American demonstration."

A group of delegates gathered around him and shouted: "Are you an American? Who are you? Go away."

The man retired hastily.

Finally, halted across from the Supreme Court Building, the women surrendered the dummy to Lieut. Walter H. Hunt, acting captain of the Capitol Police. Hunt turned the figure over to Jurney, who presented it to Pepper "as a memento."

"We quit hanging in Florida a long time ago," one of Pepper's aides said, indicating that the Senator had not quite made up his mind what to do with the unsolicited gift.

Several of the women later called upon Pepper in the Senate reception room, while others crowded into the Senate galleries to hear the debate on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill. Last night, the Florida Senator commented:

"Knowing these women, like all other Americans, are sincere in their patriotism, placing America first and Hitler last, I feel that their hanging me in effigy is a splendid demonstration of what we all desire—freedom of speech and freedom of action in the American way of doing things."

One of the leaders of the group was Mrs. Rosa M. Farber, of Detroit, who testified against the conscription bill during Senate Military Committee hearings. She said the women came from 15 States and represented 10,000 mothers, adding:

"We are the wives and sisters and mothers of men who served in the last war. We represent the little people who pay the bills and get pushed around. We've learned that we have nothing to gain from war."

Mrs. Farber said that the pilgrimage to Washington was organized by the Silver Star Mothers, with headquarters in Baltimore, and the Mothers of the U. S. A., with headquarters in Detroit. Each of the women paid her own expenses to the Capital, she added.

Earlier in the day, 50 of the women went by bus and car to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery to pray and place a wreath upon the marble mausoleum.

Blondes and Brunettes Vie for Honors at Edgewood Playground Doll Show

STILL BLOND, BUT 35 is the doll held by Anna Steloch, age 4. Mrs. John Sullivan, the owner, let Anna enter it in the show

"She messed her dolls up so I let her 'brought' mine," explained Patty Shipman, 315 Evarts street northeast, as she let a playmate preside over a buggy with a large doll in it.

It was one of the entries at the doll show at Edgewood Playground, Third and Evarts streets, yesterday afternoon.

Patty's sister, Peggy, was awarded first prize for her baby doll. Patty won second and Edna Ann Wickers, 234 Cromwell terrace, third.

"They wiggle their eyes when they're awake," said Patty, as the doll babies slept in their carriages.

FERDINAND THE BULL WAS THERE. Gwendolyn, 9, and Juanita Mastyn, 11, brought him as well as their dogs for the animal contest

There was a variety of entries in the doll classes, everything from a Hawaiian dancer and Japanese lady to a 35-year-old blonde who showed her age. This fact was not a disadvantage as she won first prize in her class. She was entered by little Anna Stelock, 2625 Third street northeast, but was the property of Mrs. John Sullivan, 220 Douglas street northeast. Mrs. Sullivan is one of the playground mothers, having two boys enrolled there, but they scorned the idea of bringing the doll, which was bought for her in this city by her mother when she was a child.

Prize winners, in addition to those mentioned, were: Tiny dolls, Eleanor Wright, 315 Evarts street; Anna Truxler, 321 Channing, and Patty Shipman. Best-dressed doll, Mary Alice Dowling, 2605 Third street; Joanne Vincent, 428 Evarts, and Frances Halley, 225 Douglas. Novelty doll, Jeanette Saur, 317 Channing; Maureen Menehan, 624 Twelfth street; Mildred Grades, 224 Cromwell terrace. Animals, Ann Mastin, 2602 Third street; Gwendolyn Mostin, 325 V street, and Anna May Guy, 319 Channing. Loveliest doll, Joan Ragland, 420 Evart; Maureen Menehan and Patty Shipman. Character dolls, Annette Rolle, 228 Cromwell terrace, Joan Ragland and Frances Halley

EVER SO MANY DOLLS had Ann Mastin in the show. But not one did Shirley Somars, 4. She looked with envy, so Ann let her play with many

Mary Haworth's Mail

Two Years Older Than Her Fiance, Girl Fears Day May Come When He Will Rue This Difference

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am just recently engaged and expect to be married in November. My fiance is a couple of years younger than I, and I am 21. However, he is easily taken for 24 and no one ever thinks I am more than 18. He seems older than his years because he has been "on his own" since he was 18, and he spent some years abroad.

Still, I worry for fear that he will change some day and fret because I am older than he is. The small difference wouldn't trouble me if we were a few years older; but I wonder if, when he reaches his early twenties, he won't change. Am I safe in marrying him? I'm very much in love with him, and he with me. Can this love last, despite the difference in our ages?

One more thing: Could you recommend some books to me, on the subject of marriage and how to make it a success? I am sure our marriage could be a success, if properly managed, because my fiance is exactly like me in likes, dislikes and personality traits. I shall be eagerly waiting your reply. Sincerely, ANNETTE.

Strong Minority Opinion Flouts Girl's Fears

DEAR ANNETTE: Two years' difference in ages is no difference at all, really. And between adults, a woman might be as much as five years older than her husband, without the difference being either physically or psychologically apparent. Furthermore, as I reported in this column a couple of years ago—there is a strong minority opinion held by specialists in human behavior, that "young marriages" are actually advantaged by the fact of the wife's being a little older than her husband.

They support this belief with the argument that the so-called "carefully reared" girl's emotional development lags somewhat behind that of a boy of equal age—for the reason that the girl is more assiduously belabored with preachments concerning the moral and social value of a negative or repressive attitude toward sex. Thus, they advance the theory that a couple of years' difference in ages, between young husband and wife (making the wife the senior), is calculated to expedite (rather than to hinder) a happy psychological and physical adjustment—just because of the girl's slightly greater "social seasoning," which presumably gives her greater emotionally aplomb and understanding.

However, there is no denying that one's viewpoint and standard of values undergo some pretty revolutionary changes between the ages of 19 and, say 23 or 25. And your beau would cut a rather sorry figure, at the latter age, if he continued to hang on to his 19-year-old notions of things. But the purpose of marriage, among other objectives, is to enable husband and wife to grow together and apace, in their mutual pursuit of happiness, security and self realization.

In marrying at all, a man and woman are actuated by the conviction that each has found in the other's society and personality an indispensable source of mental and spiritual sustenance. And whether this conviction is proved true or false depends—as all authorities agree—primarily upon the quality of character of each; and, secondarily, upon their talents or competence for pulling harmoniously in double harness.

The romantic love which bemused their senses in the beginning has little to do with the net results of their marriage. If they are persons who are co-equally capable of growing; and who cleave to the purpose of growing together rather than individualistically—then a trifling difference in ages will not (indeed, cannot) adversely affect their chances of translating most of their honeymoon dreams into a substantial and reciprocally satisfying mature-age reality.

The principal disadvantage of marrying "too young" (which is to say, when barely out of adolescence), is the fact that the couple lack the social experience which would give them a plainer foreknowledge of what their enduring preferences are to be—as to career, avocational interests, friends, ideals, intimates, etc. And there is always the possibility that, when their characters have "set" to the more or less predestined pattern, they will find they have teamed with one who is basically a stranger, because intrinsically compelled to follow a variant bent.

But in your case, with your fiance so much like yourself in "tastes, inclinations, character traits, etc., it is reasonable to hope that you can keep in stride as your respective personalities expand from (shall we say?) youngsterhood" to adulthood during the next few years.

About helpful books: I still maintain (despite some dispute of the matter aimed my way), that Theodore Van de Velde's "Ideal Marriage" is just about tops in the field. No intelligent man or woman could read the book without becoming a better husband or wife in consequence—if he absorbed and lived by its principles and recommendations, I mean.

And for a grasp on the whole meaning of love, nothing better has ever been written than Florence Guy Seabury's "Love Is a Challenge." I arrived at this conclusion independently of anybody's recommendation; and have since learned that my opinion is shared by many others, including no less distinguished a critic than Floyd Dell, whose masterly "Love in the Machine Age" establishes his right to speak with authority on such writings. Fat in Menu Upsets Diet Of Reducers

By Ida Jean Kain

CHANCES are two to one it's the fat in your menu that is putting the fat on you! It's no secret that fats contain more than twice as many calories as sugars and starches and, moreover, it is a scientific fact that body fat is stored more easily from food fat than from the other food elements. So there's a double reason for cutting down on them.

As it happens, fat is the one food principle that can be reduced to the minimum without causing any dietary deficiency. All the fat you actually need can be supplied in three pats of butter, each one-fourth inch thick, amounting to 150 calories. And you don't need that because of the fat, you need it because of the vitamin A it furnishes.

If you want to be up-to-the-minute in your reducing, you can take a haliver or cod liver oil capsule daily to assure an abundance of vitamin A without calories. On a prolonged restricted diet, the use of a vitamin A concentrate is essential.

Supply Energy

The rumor is true that "fat burns in a fire of carbohydrates" and sugars and starches cannot be restricted beyond a certain point. Aside from the stored calories which are being reconverted into energy, sugars and starches are your chief source of energy on a reducing diet.

When taken in the form of fruits, vegetables and whole grains, these foods are made to furnish the invaluable vitamins and minerals along with energy. Of course, you could get your carbohydrates in desserts and sugar—but they are lacking in the protective elements.

Whether or not you are reducing, there is a constant need for body repair and protein is the material used. Therefore, the protein in the menu can never be decreased below that which is normally required. That explains why lean meat, eggs, milk and cheese are given such prominence in the daily menus. In addition to complete protein, these foods also furnish calcium, phosphorus and iron.

In the light of all this, it can be seen that fat is the only food element which can be deleted from the diet with safety.

Schiaparelli Mother and Daughter Act

Schiaparelli Sees Escapist Trend in Styles

Designer Visits D. C.; Predicts Clothes Will Be More Feminine

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

"ESCAPE" is the word for American clothes this fall, according to couturiere Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli who paid Washington a surprise visit yesterday looking cool and chic but keeping mum about her local mission and her forthcoming "made in America" collection.

MARSHALL ADAMS

When asked whether clothes were really returning to functional simplicity in this country as a result of the war, the intense, dark little couturiere stated, "on the contrary, clothes over here are more feminine and daring than they were at the outbreak of the war and show the usual escapist urge associated with wartime."

Apparently we are trying to read normalcy into this fall's fashions, according to the noted designer. However, the shorter skirt, a customary result of war periods, is not evident this time. Usually skirts climb with wartime. But today they remain stationary and show no indication of mounting during the fall and winter, Schiaparelli said. She demonstrated the correct skirt length with her own trim skirt which hit just below the knee.

In Cool, July Black

The world's most daring fashion creator appeared in a costume of cool, inky black at her Mayflower Hotel headquarters yesterday. Slim and simple with a small Mandarin collar, her frock had circular pockets and restrained lines. The deftly cut bodice was fastened with gilt Kilo buttons which constituted a typical "Schiaparelliism" or hint of humor to be found in most of the designer's creations. Other witty "gestures" introduced by Schiaparelli in the past have included hobo handled handbags, fox scarf heads tied with hair ribbons, spun glass slippers, evening capes of cellophane, garden party gowns appliqued with lobsters, and hats shaped like ink wells, miniature ice cream cones or inverted boots.

Although Schiaparelli's designs for jewelry are equally original, the costume gems she wore were comparatively modest. They consisted of a five-strand pearl collar type necklace, two gold bracelets and a sparkling clip and ring of white stones. Her lips were bright red, her nails the same vivid color, but trim and close-clipped. A prophetic foot note was her open-toed, open-heeled black alligator pumps, her head line—equally prophetic, a blazing white Swama's turban covering the entire head and hair line.

Daughter to Help

Mme. Schiaparelli was preceded to this country by her daughter Gogo, who arrived in New York recently to embark on a career—but not a fashion one. Gogo, aged 20, a more vivacious duplicate of Elsa in manner and appearance, drove an ambulance for six months in France before coming here to assist in her mother's American cosmetic office. "Schiap, Jr." is certainly not typical of the "shoemaker's daughter who never has shoes," for she is a source of constant designer inspiration to her mother. However, like Mme. Schiaparelli, Gogo prefers dark tailored clothes and amusing, personal-looking hats like the turban worn by both the Schiaparelli above.

The designer, who started her career in Greenwich Village several years ago knitting sweaters, is more dramatic and personable than her photographs indicate. Her accent is as cosmopolitan as her background. She says little, but one feels a lurking sense of humor. As, for instance, when asked about the possibility of French clothes being created in Paris now for German frau, she solemnly replied, "I am afraid if that should be the case, they will have to be stretched."

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Air Raid

SHE LAID DOWN the newspaper on the park bench and began watching the people about her. What did the black headlines mean to them? . . . Nothing at all so long as their own little doll houses were not disturbed.

What futile little ants they were, completely absorbed in their own small worlds! . . . Mothers shrilly calling injunctions to their children in the sand piles, raucous-voiced boys swinging tennis rackets, strutting young girls parading their early fall finery, aimless men with shifty eyes looking for easy money or cheap adventure, brisk little men with brief cases on their way to see sales prospects, and in the street the swiftly gliding cars laden with more people whose minds were rushing even faster ahead toward their little personal goals of the day.

Well, of course, people had to go about their business, but some way it did seem indecent, this blind indifference to a colossal human tragedy only removed by a breadth of ocean. One's own hide—that was the one concern of every person, of every nation.

Why, one had only to discuss the war five minutes with most persons to see it come out. "Yes, wasn't it all terrible!" . . . And then the quick unconscious contraction of shoulder . . . the narrowing of eyes . . . the tightening of lips and the tense unspoken speculation, "How is it going to affect ME?"

Well, for that matter, she was as bad as the rest. Pettily absorbed in her thoughts of her new fall hat . . . her first black dress . . . the party of tomorrow night . . . the week-end trip to New York. Engrossed in her future plans and ambitions, anxious over their possible upset; reacting to defense talk with the chilling narrow fear that those she loved might face danger, and, worst of all, an increasingly calloused acceptance of the daily tale of tragedy in newspaper and on radio.

Yes, she was an ostrich and a weasel along with the rest. That was what war made of one—a primate stripped of civilization's veneer of altruism, courage and vision.

Two mothers on the bench next her watched their children in the sand pile. One had but lately arrived, and the two appraised each other with that thinly veiled primeval glance so often exchanged when strangers meet. Several other mothers sat on the benches, furtive and silent. The quiet was broken only by the prattling of the children.

Suddenly a deafening whir above! It came so suddenly all were startled. Instantaneously they lifted puzzled, apprehensive eyes as an airplane, flying unusually low, swept noisily overhead. As it became a receding speck the two mothers turned instinctively to each other. "Well, I guess we ought to be thankful this is not England," one remarked.

"Isn't it the truth!" said the other. "Whenever I think of having to grab up the baby . . ."

She paused as if the compilation of the sentence was too much.

"It would certainly be terrible—with children," spoke up another from the group beyond. The eyes of all rested lovingly on the babies in the sand pile.

The listener on the bench felt a sudden change in the air as if a veil had been lifted. All the mothers at the sand pile were talking eagerly together. A great softening and warmth seemed to sweep over her. She felt a sudden sense of kinship with everyone in the park. Each seemed to have taken on a new dignity . . . the shriveled, dirty old man rummaging for food in the trash cans . . . the cheap, short-skirted girls . . . the smug little men bustling about their business . . . the shifty idlers . . . the frowsy housewives. All possessed in common that one thing—the precious spark of human life.

Yes; that was the thing that in England was breaking down walls of reserve in bomb shelter and workshop; that was said to be drawing people together to knit, to sing, to talk, and even just to sit, so that in moments of danger they would have the reassurance of human companionship. It was the thing that some day in the last cold days of the dying world would bring all remaining humans huddling together in the face of cosmic catastrophe.

She arose and left the park, feeling strangely kind and expansive toward everyone she met. Poor little humans, all so pathetically eager to live! And all reaching in uncertainty toward each other.

Well, at least that was the blossoming of one thing of beauty out of this hideous jungle nightmare. And who knew, but perhaps out of this drawing together might come in time a greater drawing together of all peoples who valued the dignity and preciousness of human life, no matter in what nation or race it might dwell. And then indeed would men be able to "beat their swords into plowshares."

Salmon Salad, Cucumber Mayonnaise Has Appeal

MARKETS these days are stocked with vegetables and fruits in gay array, furnishing inspiration aplenty for tempting color and flavor combinations. And color and texture of foods are to be considered as well as their nutritive value.

A festive looking summer salad plate is one starring canned salmon. This seafood supplies important minerals and vitamins in addition to the protein, and the fine flavor blends well with crisp vegetables to enhance its appeal and add to its food value. Salmon is simplicity itself to prepare. A recipe for Salmon Salad with Cucumber Mayonnaise follows:

SALMON SALAD WITH CUCUMBER MAYONNAISE

Flake 1 pound canned salmon. Mix lightly with ¼ cup minced parsley, 1 cup chopped celery and 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper. Place in a mold of any desired shape and chill mixture thoroughly. Unmold and serve on platter outlined with parsley and garnish with whole tomatoes, from which the peelings have been removed. Serve with cucumber mayonnaise made by mixing ½ cup mayonnaise, 3 tablespoons lemon juice and ½ cup grated cucumber together.

An hour or so should be allowed for chilling the mold. Crisp, hot potato chips, bread and butter, a beverage and a seasonable dessert will round out the meal admirably.

Miss Latimer Teaches Red Cross Class How to Transcribe Words Into Braille

"WHEN I can no longer help someone else, I want to turn up my toes." That's the philosophy of Lillian Latimer, of the Home for the Blind, and she speaks as though she means it. She conducts Braille classes at the Red Cross, where sighted women can learn how to transcribe the printed word into the raised characters of the Braille alphabet.

She finds it takes about three months to become a proficient transcriber, if one practices conscientiously. Because of the complexities involved, many of her pupils drop out before completing the course, but a few always succeed in passing the examination and receiving their certificates at the ceremony held annually at the Library of Congress.

Miss Latimer feels her efforts are repaid if she turns out three or four real transcribers a year. She encourages such star pupils to devote themselves after graduation to the transcription of textbooks for college students. Because of the relatively small demand for such books, she says, they seldom are manufactured and in almost all cases must be transcribed by hand.

Judge Ellen K. Ready still revels in the luxury of her chambers in the new Municipal Court Building. The walls are paneled in walnut; the furniture is upholstered in lush red and blue leather, and the blue tile walls and glassed-in shower in the bathroom would be envied by any home-owner. Her mother, however, thinks an office bath is "scandalous."

The comforts of the new building, particularly its air conditioning, have a marked effect on everyone in her courtroom, she finds; the jurors, for instance, who used to squirm uncomfortably in the musty old courthouse, now concentrate on the testimony, and as a result justice has a better chance.

A housewife who had sent her husband's winter clothes to the cleaner was surprised two hours later to see the company's truck skid to a stop before the house. The driver leaped up the front walk with the air of one carrying a message to Garcia. "Haven't you missed something, ma'am?" he asked breathlessly when she opened the door, and he held out a set of false teeth. She recognized it as an old plate her absent-minded spouse apparently had thrust into his trousers pocket when the dentist gave him his new set. "Thought he might want them over the week-end," the driver explained.

It was blue Monday morning in a local grocery store (one of a large chain, but that's the only clew you're going to get). A highly respectable young matron was the only customer. To her the lone clerk addressed himself: "Gee, I feel awful. Couldn't you go for a highball?" The customer, absently fingering her grocery list, said yes, she guessed she could.

Without wasting a moment, the clerk led her to a store room, seated her on a packing case, produced ingredients and had two highballs mixed in no time. "Here's how!" he said. As in a dream, the young matron found herself tilting glasses at 10 a. m. with her grocery clerk. The drink finished, she went on with her shopping, a little dizzy from the unexpected turn of events, not to mention the rye.

Balance Called Most Important Factor in Dress

New York, (AP).—From the ultra-smart, "Back Bay, Blue Book" atmosphere of Jane Derby's dress design house came the paradoxical advice today that "no one should follow the very last word to fashion."

"Women are more likely to follow the very last word than to dress becomingly," said the designer, while her business partner, Rebecca Hamilton, who is J. P. Morgan's niece by marriage, nodded her sleek head in agreement.

"That is a grave error. It is always important to follow the trend, in order not to be conspicuous. No one should ever be conspicuously dressed. But the "very last word" needs to be proven and adapted."

Here are some of her clothes ideas:

"Balance, which has to do with perfect fit, is the most important thing in a dress, the thing most people ignore."

"Clothes should be of excellent fabrics, well-fitted—and simple. That will be the well-dressed woman in all places, regardless of time."

Beatrice Evelyn Fischer and Grant Boss Exchange Wedding Vows in Cathedral Chapel

Bride Foregoes White For Stunning Gown Of Champagne Color

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WITH A WEDDING RING on her finger and wedding bells in the air, Miss Beatrice Evelyn Fischer became the bride of Grant Boss yesterday afternoon in picturesque St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral.

Culminating a romance that has been followed with much interest in Capital society, the ceremony took place at 4:30 o'clock, with Cannon William M. Bradner officiating. The former Miss Fischer is the daughter of Mrs. Beatrice Dulin Cornwell and Capt. H. E. Fischer, U. S. N., the latter of whom is now stationed on the West Coast. Mr. Boss' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Boss, of Washington.

MRS. GRANT BOSS

Bride Wears Champagne Satin

Tall vases of white lilies flanked the altar before which the couple exchanged vows. Earlier, members of the wedding party proceeded down the aisle with a background of soft organ music; then the familiar strains from Lohengrin's "Wedding March" announced the approach of the bride. She appeared with Dr. William Calhoun Stirling who, in the absence of her father, gave her in marriage. Mrs. Stirling is her godmother.

Instead of traditional white bridal attire, the bride had chosen a stunning gown of champagne-colored satin and tulle. Her fitted bodice of the heavier material was patterned with long sleeves and dainty shirring accented the sweetheart neckline. The full tulle overskirt billowed from a low hipline, and a fingertip veil of the same material fell from a tiara of braided satin. A bouquet of creamy Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley and a single strand of pearls completed her costume.

Nancy Hoskinson Is Maid of Honor

Miss Nancy Hoskinson, the maid of honor, wore a full-skirted frock of flame chiffon, made with long sleeves and a bodice similar to the bridal gown. Her off-the-face hat of red velvet had a scalloped brim, and she carried yellow dahlias.

Bridesmaids were Miss Julienne Cahill, Miss Nancy Rheem and Miss Doris Becker. Their costumes of emerald green chiffon were cut like Miss Hoskinson's. Their hats were of the same style as hers and they carried bronze dahlias.

A. Britton Browne was best man, and ushers included Rudolph Kauffann 2d, Godfrey Kauffmann and George Wheeler, 2d.

Following the wedding there was a reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Stirling at 2818 Thirty-first street. Mrs. Cornwell stood with the wedding party to receive. Her floor-length gown of pink wool was trimmed in silver lace and accented with Dubonnet accessories.

Mrs. Boss, mother of the bridegroom, wore aqua lace, set off with a narrow gold belt, a leghorn hat and an orchid corsage. Yellow roses brimmed from vases throughout the house, with the exception of the dining room where white blossoms and a tiered white wedding cake were featured.

After the reception, Mr. Boss and his bride left for New York and will go from there to Canada, where they will stay at the Log Chateau, an annex of the famous Seigniory Club. Traveling, Mrs. Boss wore a smart blue frock with a gray blue coat and blending accessories.

Bride Made Debut In Washington

The former Miss Fischer, who is known to her friends as Betty, is a graduate of Holton Arms and made her debut here a few seasons ago. Mr. Boss attended the Potomac School, the Landon School, and St. Alban's. The couple will make their home here at 3015 Forty-fourth street.

Julia Evans Is Married To W. C. Davis

Marriage Takes Place in St. Paul's Episcopal Church

St. Paul's Episcopal Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Julia MacNain Evans and William C. Davis, jr., yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock with the Rev. Robert C. Kell officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hugh Evans, of Georgetown. Mr. Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Chalmers Davis, sr., of Haddon Heights, N. J.

Miss Mary Webb Hall Only Attendant

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Peyton Randolph Evans, sr., entertained members of the bridal party as well as relatives and out-of-town guests at a reception at their home on Forty-fourth place.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a traveling suit of aqua blue, trimmed in blue fox and a cluster of orchids. Miss Mary Webb Hall, of Petersburg, Va., was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of mulberry velvet and carried white gladioli.

Harry M. Meacham, of Catonsville, Md., served as best man. Ushers were Peyton Randolph Evans and Warren Spencer.

Many Guests From Out of Town

The bride attended George Washington University and Indiana University. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma fraternity. Mr. Evans was graduated from Indiana University.

Out-of-town guests at the ceremony included Mr. and Mrs. William S. Meacham, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hall, jr., of Petersburg, Va. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sargent, of Upper Montclair, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Davis, of Haddon Heights, N. J.; Dr. and Mrs. Roland C. Davis, of Bloomington, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Meacham and Miss Frances Meacham, of Catonsville, Md.

The couple will make their home in New York City.

Nadine Nash To Wed Today

Of interest to Washington will be the wedding in Cleveland, Ohio, this afternoon of Miss Nadine Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Nash, of Walsenburg, Colo., to Robert Keith Faris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Faris, of Cleveland.

Both attended George Washington University, and Mr. Faris is assistant physical training director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The ceremony will take place at the Epworth Euclid Church. The bride will wear a street length white dress and a lace straw hat to match. Miss Lois Prinett will be her maid of honor and only attendant and Marvin Faris will be best man for his brother. A reception at the bridegroom's home will follow.

At George Washington, Miss Nash was social chairman and chaplain of Phi Mu sorority. Mr. Faris, who was graduated from the university in 1939, was in that year's "Who's Who in American Schools and Colleges." He was a member of the all-American basketball team and a G letter man in college sports. He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, Gate and Key, and Phi Sigma Kappa.

Mrs. Rust Visits In Essex, Conn.

Mrs. Pearsons Rust has gone to Essex, Conn., to visit Mrs. Benjamin Thaw. She will not return here until September 10.

The summer colony at Essex from Washington has increased by leaps and bounds this year. Gen. and Mrs. William M. Wright are occupying a house there with their daughter, Mrs. David Key, and Mrs. George T. Pettingill is another who has a home in the resort town.

Ann Macy to Make Debut at Party In Convent, N. J.

Of interest in Washington and Maryland was the recent announcement that Miss Ann C. Macy, daughter of Mrs. Josiah Macy, of Morristown, N. J., would make her bow to society at a party given in honor of her and Miss Adelaide R. McAlpin on September 13.

Miss McAlpin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hayward McAlpin, will entertain at the tea-dance, which will take place at their home in Convent, N. J.

Miss Macy's father, who died five years ago, was a governor of the Morristown Club. The debutante is a granddaughter of the late Capt. Frederic May Wise, U. S. N., and the late Mrs. Wise, through whom she is related to the distinguished Maryland Adams and Wise families. She is a niece of the Duchess de Richelieu, of New York, the former Miss Elinor Douglas Wise.

Jane Boutwell, Helen Cappel Home From Music Camp

Miss Helen Cappel, daughter of C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Miss Jane Boutwell, daughter of William Dow Boutwell, have just returned after eight weeks at the National Music Camp, Interlaken, Mich.

Miss Cappel majored in the modern dance, and in the season's final dance concert she was featured soloist in the performance of Tschaikowsky's Sixth Symphony. She also studied art with Carlos Lopez of the Meinzinger Art Foundation in Detroit.

Miss Boutwell continued her study of the clarinet with Gustave Langenus and also worked in the accordion class.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Harold F. Pullen and their two daughters, Margaret and Patricia, are here from St. Paul, Minn. for two months and are at the Wardman Park. They will be joined there shortly by Mrs. Pullen's son, Midshipman Douglas Munnikhuysen.

Mrs. Vandenberg Returns After Vacation in West

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg has returned to Washington after over a month's absence and has joined the Senator in their apartment at the Wardman Park.

After attending both political conventions, Mrs. Vandenberg visited two ranches in New Mexico, where, she says, she didn't read a newspaper or answer a telephone. Three weeks of rest there have left her feeling fine and glad to be back in Washington.

Though the Senator is running for office again, most persons think of him as a Michigan institution and are inclined to forget he comes up for reelection every six years. His son, Arthur, jr., is in charge of the home office in Grand Rapids. Mrs. Vandenberg says she never makes speeches, but that she will "do a little visiting there" in the interests of her husband's campaign. She expects to leave for Michigan about Labor Day and hopes that Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Pfeiffer will join her in Grand Rapids. Mrs. Pfeiffer is the former Miss Betty Vandenberg and is now vacationing in New Hampshire with her husband.

Entertainment Planned for 600 Wives Of Veterinary Medicine Group Delegates

THE FINAL MEETING has been held by the woman's committee in charge of the entertainment of the wives of members of the American Veterinary Medicine Association convening in the Capital next week. The 40 women of the committee met at the Mayflower Tuesday, under the chairmanship of Mrs. C. D. Lowe, to complete their plans. Most of them are now resting up for the busy program of the week ahead.

More than 600 women will accompany their husbands to Washington for the convention Tuesday. Headquarters will be at the Mayflower Hotel. The opening luncheon for the women visitors will be given there, with silver spoons as souvenirs for all the guests. Mrs. Washington I. Cleveland, managing editor of "The American Motorist," will speak, describing interesting places in the city, and Mr. Cleveland will show motion pictures of the Capital.

In the afternoon there will be a card party and at night the women will join their husbands for the alumni dinner. Graduates of 23 colleges will divide into alumni groups for this affair. Mrs. Lowe attending the Ohio State dinner with Mr. Lowe, who is in the Animal Husbandry Division of the U. S Department of Agriculture. A reception and dance will follow.

Wednesday night, 2,000 are expected at the banquet of the association in the Mayflower ballroom, with the overflow accommodated at tables in the corridor and adjoining rooms.

VISIT GIRLS' CAMP—Yesterday Mrs. Lowe, who is president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, accompanied Miss Sybil Baker, supervisor of playgrounds to the summer camp of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, where more than 100 girls are now having a two weeks' vacation. The congress co-operated in arrangements to make the camp available to the girls by appropriating $50 as the salary of one of the counselors.

Members of the boy patrols will go to camp when the girls leave and $200 has been donated by the congress to provide vacations for 20 of these. Many of the local P.-T. A. units also are sending one or more of the boy patrols at their schools to the camp.

NEW OFFICERS—The American Legion Auxiliary unit of Colmar Manor, Md., has elected Mrs. Amanda Long as president.

Other new officers include Mrs. Mildred Tucker, vice president; Mrs. William Mitchell, secretary; Mrs. Carl W. Walal, treasurer; Mrs. Mar O'Neill, historian, Mrs. Leah Christian, chaplain, and Mrs. J. Feigheune, sergeant at arms.

CONVENTION ECHOES—Most of the members of Phi Delta Delta, international legal sorority, who attended the recent convention in Portland, Oreg., have returned home . . . and here is one of the stories they tell.

Kitty Vaux, a national officer, and Irene Wright, business manager of the national magazine, learned there was to be a police escort for the delegates as they went from the headquarters of the convention to the hotel where their annual banquet was to be held. They confided to each other that they had always wanted to ride in a police car with the siren wide open, and decided to see whether the friendly Portland police would let them realize that ambition. They did. Irene and Kitty rode right up in front, practically deafened by the siren as it blazed a clear road for the cars of the other delegates trailing behind in private cars.

Britain Reported Seeking U. S. Pact

Canadian-American Parley Seen First Step Toward Alliance

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 21.—Unofficial but well-informed sources indicated today that the British government is seeking a military alliance with the United States.

Canadian-American discussions on mutual defense are considered in these quarters to be the opening wedge in a British effort to obtain a full military accord between the United States and Britain.

As envisaged now, such an alliance would embrace the defense of Canada and other British possessions in the Western Hemisphere and, perhaps even more important, "would form the basis for common diplomacy in the Far East at the conclusion of the European conflict," as one informant put it.

"The plain truth of the matter," said a neutral diplomat, "is that neither Great Britain nor the United States has a powerful friend left anywhere else in the world. It behooves them to get together and make the best of the sorry situation."

Official sources were reluctant to comment on the talks between President Roosevelt and Canadian Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King, which resulted in a decision to establish a joint defense board, but satisfaction was evident.

Naval Defense Studied

There were reports here that the conversations progressed to the hypothetical naval defense of Canada and the United States in the event the British fleet were lost and aerial defense not only on the seaboard but from United States bases on the Pacific such as Sitka and northern Alaska.

Official British reluctance to comment may be explained by the public belief in England that a non-belligerent United States is more valuable to Britain than an America at war. In the latter event, these persons reason, the United States would have to use most of her planes and munitions for strengthening her own Panama and Atlantic defenses, instead of letting Britain use them.

This group probably is far more powerful than the smaller and more vocal body, including a sprinkling of American expatriates, who are calling for immediate American intervention against Germany.

Indeed, there are evidences that the activities of the second group are embarrassing the British government in its efforts to obtain war supplies from the United States. These activities, it is feared, are arousing isolationist sentiment in America by what one member of Parliament describes as "short-sighted and arrogant tactics."

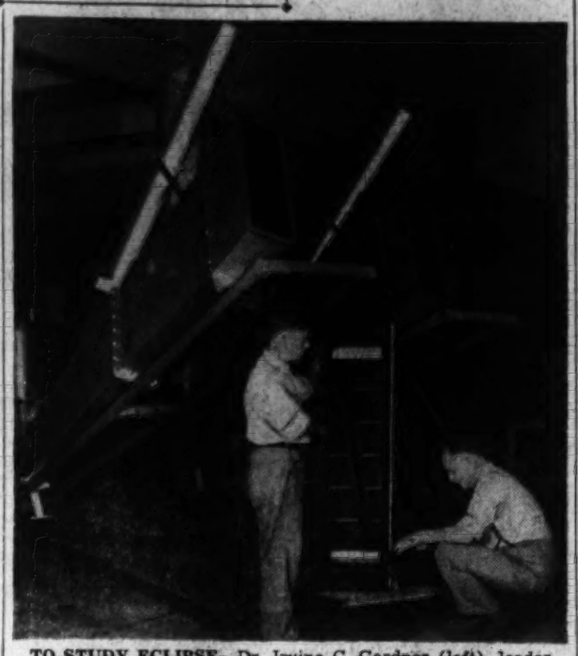
Copyright by The New York Times.

London, Aug. 21.—Some conservative members of Parliament who doubt the wisdom of the government's proposal to give the United States 99-year leases on British bases are trying to whittle down the period of the leases.

A motion put down by Sir Frederick Sykes suggesting that leases of from 15 to 21 years and an early post-war readjustment to prewar conditions would be sufficient to meet needs of the occasion, was supported by 12 Conservatives and one Liberal.

The motion is not likely to reach the debate stage, but it is typical of the opinion of a small but influential Tory group.

Eclipse Expedition Prepares to Sail For Solar Study



TO STUDY ECLIPSE—Dr. Irvine C. Gardner (left), leader of solar eclipse expedition sailing Saturday for Brazil, and a technical assistant give final inspection to one of two spectographs with which they will study eclipse

6 to Travel 9,000 Miles to Get 5-Minute Glimpse of Eclipse

National Geographic-Bureau of Standards Expedition Leaves Saturday for Brazil To See Sun and Moon Meet October 1

Six Washingtonians will travel 9,000 miles with a 15,000-pound load of equipment for a brief peek at the scheduled "meeting" of the sun and moon October 1.

Their destination, Patos, Brazil, they make up the National Geographic Society-National Bureau of Standards expedition headed by Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, of the Bureau of Standards. The party sails from New York Saturday.

The scientists will take two spectrographs to photograph the sun's spectrum.

Arriving at Recife, Brazil, the party will journey by truck and auto to a point 200 miles inland and set up a portable laboratory to study the eclipse, which will last about 5 minutes.

There will be no gamble with the weather, the experts state. Patos is situated in a high, dry plateau region and this bugaboo of astronomers has been just about ruled out. Another advantage is that all instruments will be "tied together" so that they will operate automatically, thus leaving the expedition members free to make their own observations during the brief period of darkness.

A large telescope camera designed by Dr. Gardner and used by him several years ago in Russia and on Canton Islands in mid-Pacific, will be focused on the sun. The expedition will reach Patos in ample time to set the instruments in position and to rehearse the program. When the roles to be played by instruments and men have been perfected, a roll of paper, somewhat like a player piano roll, will be punched with holes and slots to operate the instruments automatically. A hole or slot will cause the opening or closing of shutters of cameras, the winding of films, and the application of suction to hold films in place.

The party will sail from Recife on its return to New York on October 14.

Besides Dr. Gardner, the staff of the expedition will include Dr. E. O. Hulbert, of the Naval Research Laboratory; Dr. Paul A. McNally, S. J., director of observatory, Georgetown University; Dr. Carl C. Kiess, spectroscopist, and Dr. Theodore R. Gilliland, of the Bureau of Standards. Richard H. Stewart, staff photographer of the National Geographic, will also be a member of the expedition.

Nazis Claim Hits on British Airports

Factories, Food Ships From U. S. Also Reported Bombed

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 21.—Airports and motor factories in middle England and harbors on the east coast were asserted bombed today in what German sources called an interval of "armed reconnaisance."

Fires and explosions were observed in the bombed factories after the raid, German reports said, and at one of the airports five British planes on the ground were destroyed, they asserted.

[The German wireless said tonight "successful" bombing attacks on an unstated number of British merchantmen "far off" the Irish north coast had been reported for the first time in an army bulletin.

[It was added that they were freighters carrying food from the United States on a scheduled course north of Island and through the North Channel and the Arish Sea.

[The attacks, said the wireless, occurred more than 100 miles northwest of Ireland and the fact that they were possible "shows clearly the extraordinary strategic advantage possessed by Germany. Germany is actually in a position to prevent supplies from reaching Britain not only in the waters off the British coast but also far out in the Atlantic."]

Unfavorable weather prevented mass daylight raids, said DNB, the official news agency. In widespread raids last night, however, great damage was reported inflicted on airdromes, harbors and industrial plants in southern and middle England.

In a raid on Great Yarmouth a British warship was bombed, the high command said, and off the north coast of Ireland a 12,000-ton merchantman was sunk, while in the more distant reaches of the North Atlantic three other merchant ships were hit.

As a result of yesterday's scattered and minor fighting in the air, it was said unofficially, six British planes were shot down by German airmen, while four more were downed by antiaircraft batteries. Three German planes were reported lost.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 21.—Egypt clung tonight to her determination to keep out of war with Italy unless directly attacked or invaded.

After a four-hour debate on war policies in the Chamber of Deputies Premier Hassan Sabry Pasha told the press that Egypt "harbors no ill will against anybody," but added that she will "declare war if her territory or her army is the object of an attack."

The premier told the deputies "nothing has developed to change the government's policy" of watchful neutrality unless Egypt is directly invaded or attacked.

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani shifted concentrations of Italian troops today around the Bardia base, 30 miles from the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, again threatening the long-awaited drive into Egypt.

Reforming Lines

Recent movements observed by British patrols were believed intended to refill big gaps ripped in supply bases and communication lines by the British naval shelling of August 17 and to reinforce and reform Italian lines before undertaking the assault.

Graziani was believed to be concentrating on maintenance of contact with Bardia once the forward movement starts, to assure adequate supplies of water, food, oil and munitions for advance of troops, tanks and armored cars.

The British, sticking to their "active defense" policy, have made no move to advance into Libya.

The Royal Air Force heavily bombed enemy bases in Ethiopia. French fliers in British service made reconnaissance flights over British Somaliland.

Fascist Port Bombed

Nairobi, Kenya, Aug. 21 (AP).—The South African Air Force bombed Mogadisciu, most important port in Italian Somaliland, as well as "all known airdromes" in southern Ethiopia yesterday, a British communique here today said.

Mogadisciu would be the probable base of Italian operations by air and sea craft against British Aden in Arabia.

Gibraltar Raided

La Linea, Spain, Aug. 21 (AP).—The British fortress of Gibraltar was twice bombed today, in attacks apparently intended to underline explosively Italy's "total, unconditional" blockade of all the vast British African areas.

From here, flames could be seen racing down the crest of the great rock—the site of long-range anti-aircraft batteries—toward the town of Gibraltar itself.

But the British command there declared the fire was brought quickly under control and that the damage was only "slight." One of the attacking planes was reported brought down.

Italy declared her blockade—similar to that which Germany proclaimed about the British Isles—was intended to bring a "total interruption" of all commerce between England and all her colonies and protectorates in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden.

Without giving the time or place, Stefani, the official Italian news agency, announced that seven British planes had been shot down in an air and naval battle in the Mediterranean. British warships were declared to have been bombed with "considerable" effect. Bombardments of the British air bases on the Mediterranean island of Malta were reported to have fired buildings and smashed runways.

SEEKS ALTITUDE RECORD—Betsy Ross, a petite and 20-year-old Harrisburg (Pa.) flier, is waiting today for the result of her flight yesterday to establish the first altitude record for light planes. A sealed barograph in the plane has been sent to the NAA in Washington to be checked. Miss Ross, who weighs only 99 pounds, is shown with the oxygen mask which she discarded at 17,000 feet because "it bothered me." "The cold air bothered me most," she said. "I had a fur coat on but that didn't keep my legs warm. My nose was cold, too."

Ortiz, Cabinet Are Reported Ready to Quit

Argentina Land Deal Scandal Brings Political Crisis

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Aug. 21.—Reports circulated tonight that Roberto M. Ortiz, Argentina's sick President, and his cabinet might resign at any moment as the aftermath of a long-developing political crisis precipitated by an airdrome land purchase scandal.

These rumors were heard and published while Ortiz met his cabinet in a bedside conference—the third since last midnight—in the absence of Vice President Ramon S. Castillo, who had been acting as chief executive since Ortiz turned the country over to him July 3.

Some observers said the session was called to decide whether changes in Ortiz's cabinet would be necessary as the result of the report of an investigating committee involving cabinet members in the questionable land deal.

Gen. Juan Bautista Molina, a Rightist, and former chief of the army's engineer division, who was mentioned in recent reports of attempts to seize the government by force, was placed under 60-day arrest yesterday after he accused Gen. Carols Marquez, the war minister, of falsely blaming Gen. Molina and other officers of responsibility for the land deal in order to shield himself.

A Senate committee is investigating the deal.

Immediate measures to protect all army headquarters and barracks against "any attack on public order" were ordered today after a conference of military leaders with the war minister.

Severesky Asks $22,000,000 In Plane Suit

Aircraft Designer Files Claims Against Republic Aviation

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 21.—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky, Russian World War flier and until recently an aircraft designer and manufacturer, has brought suit against the Republic Aviation Corporation and its president, W. Wallace Kellett, and directors for more than $22,000,000.

The suits, instituted in the State Supreme and Federal Courts, ask compensation and expenses for Seversky personally and damages for stockholders, the latter on allegations of mismanagement and fraud.

Kellett replaced Seversky as president of what was then the Seversky Aircraft Corporation, in May, 1939.

In addition to a $20,000,000 State Supreme Court action, Seversky filed suit for compensation and expenses in the Federal District Court, Brooklyn, asked for $2,497,069.

His attorney said the stockholders action was "the first move to bring . . . the board of directors before the courts to answer for their activities in keeping out of the company the man who, with a handful of collaborators, built the corporation from an airplane blueprint to a manufacturing enterprise employing 2,000 persons.

"The lawsuits involve not only the question of recovering for Seversky the amounts claimed due him but represent an effort to preserve for the Nation an important unit for the production of military pursuit aircraft."

The stockholders' suit charges that the present management is incompetent and that through waste and mismanagement the company has lost its position in the aircraft industry and the profits that otherwise would have accrued to it.

It further alleges that the management has deprived the Nation of the facilities of the company and of the contribution it should now be making to the national defense program.

Seversky, whose planes are in the service of the Air Corps, at one time served as consulting engineer to the War Department and the Sperry Gyroscope Co., and he developed an automatic bomb sight for the Army. His planes have won the Bendix transcontinental race three years in succession.

Cabinet Purge Believed Near In England

Chamberlain, Halifax Expected to Go for Past Mistakes

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 21.—a new sifting of the British cabinet that will eliminate Neville Chamberlain and others under increasing fire for the past year's "cataract of disaster" was predicted in well-informed political quarters tonight, on the eve of a two-week adjournment of Parliament.

These are the men upon whom there is speculation:

Chamberlain, now lord president of the council, because he was wrong about appeasement and is accused increasingly of failure to prepare adequately while he was prime minister for the total war which burst upon Europe this spring.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, because Britain virtually is isolated diplomatically, except for the United States, and is making no observable progress toward rapprochement with Soviet Russia.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood, criticized for making a "timid" war budget when Britons were demanding that every resource be utilized.

Alfred Duff-Cooper, minister of information, under criticism for weak propaganda activity in Spain.

Herbert Morrison, minister of supply. Today, in the House of Commons, the sale of Iranian oil to Japan by a British company was under fire.

There is, however, general approval of Prime Minister Churchill; indeed, his war review of yesterday gave the nation a surge of confidence.

Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, now commanding the First Division with headquarters at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., was assigned by the War Department yesterday to command the Fourth Corps Area with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., beginning October 1.

He will succeed Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, who will go on leave pending retirement for age next January.

Brig. Gen. Karl Truesdell, now commanding the infantry section of the First Division, will succeed Gen. Short in the division command.

West Coast Plants Building 2,100 Planes

Los Angeles, Aug. 21 (AP).—Aircraft industries in the Los Angeles area are building 2,100 military planes for national defense on Government orders totaling more than $225,000,000, William S. Knudsen, National Defense Advisory Commission chairman, disclosed today.

"However," he added, "the plane industry and the commission are not waiting for the contracts to be signed, sealed and delivered, but work already h begun. We want to get the ball rolling and get the men working on the planes. That's why I am here today."

$15,000,000 Gun Contract Cleared

The Defense Commission has cleared a $15,000,000 contract for Army guns to be manufactured by the Savage Arms Corporation, of Utica, N. Y. The contract has not yet been formally signed.

Aircraft Plant Plans Big Expansion

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 21 (INS). A $15,000,000 expansion program designed to double plane output in two divisional plants and speed up work on Government orders was announced today by the United Aircraft Corporation.

Expansion of the East Hartford and Stratford plants, called for under the program, is expected to double the present monthly output of an estimated 600 planes and provide an annual output of 14,400.

Bethlehem Steel Will Raise Wages

Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 21 (INS). Bethlehem Steel Co. will raise its minimum average wage to 62½ cents an hour to meet requirements of the national defense program. The company stated today that the minimum wage, effective September 1, was established to make Bethlehem's facilities "fully available to help satisfy the anticipated heavy demands of the Government for steel products for the national defense program."

War Department Awards Contracts For Pilot Training

The War Department awarded $10,893,248 in contracts for the training of fliers and mechanics yesterday and in so doing disclosed that it had doubled the number of civilian schools which would give primary flight training to Army air pilots.

Representing a continuation and extension of the existing school program, the contracts were the first awarded under plans to step up pilot training to 7,000 men a year. Additional contracts also are being negotiated.

Under the current program, an estimated 3,000 pilots who took their initial 12 weeks of instruction in nine civilian schools are scheduled to have been graduated by September 28. Six months of advanced training at Randolph and Kelly fields in Texas will follow the civilian school instruction.

Under the new contracts, 18 schools will take Air Corps recruits. The schools include the original nine, which have expanded their facilities.

Alexandria Exhibit To Close Tonight

The annual handicraft exhibit of Alexandria (Va.) playgrounds, which opened at the Maury School on Tuesday, will close tonight at 5 o'clock. The exhibit, featuring articles made by more than 500 playground children, has been attracting large throngs daily.

The Jefferson School playground was awarded the American Legion Trophy for the best all-around exhibit for the second consecutive year, while Mount Vernon playground was awarded honorable mention.

Craft exhibits of local colored playgrounds will be held today and tomorrow at the Lyles-Crouch and Parker-Gray schools.

Alexandria Band Concerts Planned

A series of band concerts sponsored by Alexandria (Va) city officials will be resumed on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, when the Citizens Band will be heard in an hour's program of modern and classical selections on the steps of the George Washington Masonic Memorial Temple. Prof. Otto Siebeneichen will direct the program.

Roger C. Sullivan has been appointed chairman for the concert series, and announces this schedule for the remainder of the summer: August 29, Boys Club Band of the Metropolitan Police Department; September 5, Washington Gas Light Co. Band, and September 6, Alexandria Citizens Band.

All concerts in the series will be held at the Masonic Temple.

Chevy Chase Bus Hearing Called

Resumption of a public hearing on the northbound route of Chevy Chase buses was called yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission for September 6 at 1:30 p. m. in the District Building.

Section of the northern route in question is between the intersection of Thirteenth and H streets northwest and Eighteenth street and Connecticut avenue. The present route is via Thirteenth street, H street, Seventeenth street and Connecticut avenue. It has been proposed to use the route via Thirteenth street, I street and eighteenth street.

Clipper Cuts Brazil Trip to 3 Days

Miami, Fla., Aug. 21 (AP).—Pan-American's stratoclipper Comet flew into Rio de Janeiro today along an oversea and overland route that brings the Brazilian capital to within three days of the United States.

The 20-ton land plane cut across the "hump" of Brazil. Heretofore, Pan-American clipper ships have flown around Brazil's hump, a distance of 5,717 miles from Miami, that required five days to traverse. The new route, never before flown by a passenger plane, cuts the distance to 4,430 miles.

U. S. Bars Entry Of Polish Prince

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—Immigration officials withheld official permission to Prince Wladyslaw Sapieha of Poland and his wife, Princess Mathylda, to enter this country today when they arrived from Lisbon on the Yankee Clipper.

The authorities classified the couple as "doubtful visitors" and detained them for two hours while the prince telephoned State Department officials in Washington.

Finally the prince and princess were allowed to go to a hotel, with their status still in doubt. Immigration officials indicated they might be asked to report to Ellis Island tomorrow for a hearing.

Absolved in Death Of Boy, Driver Faces New Charges

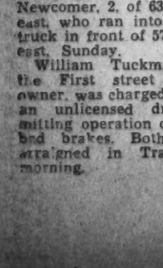
Less than a half hour after he was exonerated by a coroner's jury in connection with the traffic death of a 2-year-old boy, Lawrence Miles, colored, 36, of 1006 First street northwest, was charged with driving without a permit and bad brakes.

He was taken into custody immediately after the inquest and booked at the First Precinct. The owner of the truck also was charged. Miles appeared before the jury in the death of Larry Newcomer, 2, of 63 K street northeast, who ran into the side of the truck in front of 57 K street northeast, Sunday.

William Tuckman, colored, of the First street address, truck owner, was charged with permitting an unlicensed driver and permitting operation of a vehicle with bad brakes. Both men will be arraigned in Traffic Court this morning.

Dr. Lindley, Father Of Columnist, Dies On Pacific Liner

Dr. Ernest Hiram Lindley, 71, chancellor emeritus of the University of Kansas and father of Ernest K. Lindley, Washington Post political columnist, died yesterday at sea.



Dr. Lindley

Death came aboard the Japanese liner Asama Maru as it steamed toward the United States somewhere between Shanghai and Honolulu. Dr. Lindley was stricken last month with pleurisy while visiting Peiping, China, on the last half of a world tour he and Mrs. Lindley began in August, 1939.

He rallied sufficiently to continue to Shanghai, where the couple embarked August 11. Last week he suffered a relapse and since Saturday his condition had been critical. "His journey ended peacefully this morning. Burial at sea," said a cablegram from Mrs. Lindley.

Dr. Lindley, a native of Paoli, Ind., was president of the University of Idaho from 1917 to 1920 and chancellor of the University of Kansas from 1920 to 1939. He held A. B., A. M., Ph. D. and LL. D. degrees, having studied at a number of universities here and abroad.

Water Dept. Acts in Fight On Saboteurs

Budget Asks Funds To Guard Supply System; Higher Rates Called For

The District Water Department yesterday asked the Commissioners for a 1942 budget of $3,942,660, including funds for "extra precautions" to guard against possible sabotage of the water supply system.

This was an increase of $1,368,045 over the current appropriation. It was stated also that water rents would probably be increased to meet demands for protection of the water works, and extension of the distribution and supply systems. The latter is considered necessary because of Washington's enlarged population.

"Should foreign relations become strained, from any one of various causes, the danger from sabotage will become more acute and extra precautions will have to be taken," the officials asserted.

In order to protect the intakes at Great Falls, the Dalecarlia Reservoir reservation, the Dalecarlia filter plant, the McMillan filter plant and several isolated works, with fence enclosures, $65,000 is needed, it was stated.

The water system of the District has two distinct branches, the supply branch under the direction of the District Engineer, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, and the distributing branch, under the direction of the Commissioners.

Both budgets, which total $3,924,660 are payable from the District's water fund. The increase for the distribution branch for 1942 over 1941 is $502,835, while the increase for the supply branch is $865,210. To meet the increase, the department chiefs stated the revenue would have to be increased.

A new schedule of rates is being prepared by the Water Department, and will be submitted if the Commissioners are willing to approve the new program.

Highlights of the expansion program for 1942 are:

Construction of a 20,000,000-gallon filtered-water reservoir on Government-owned property adjacent to the McMillan filter plant: $490,000.

Conversion of the Dalecarlia hydroelectric station into an emergency pumping station for lifting raw water from the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal into the Dalecarlia reservoir: $75,000.

Construction of fireproof shops and storehouses for Dalecarlia and McMillan filter plants: $84,000.

New booster pump and electric control equipment for McMillan filter plant: $63,000.

Extension of the water department distribution system, which next year probably will operate without the aid of WPA projects: $500,000.

Construction of water main from Good Hope road and Twenty-fifth street to Alabama and Massachusetts avenue southeast; from Thirteenth and Upshur streets to Thirteenth and Otis streets northeast: $495,000.

Although the Dalecarlia filter plant was designed to care for Washington's needs until 1950, the "unusual rapid increase in the rate of growth of this metropolitan area" has made it necessary to provide additional facilities at this time, it was stated. The present national emergency will increase considerably the population of Washington, and filtration facilities and filtered-water storage must keep pace with the growth, the budget text stated.

During July, 1940, the water consumption on one occasion exceeded 150,000,000 gallons a day and for seven days exceeded 140,000,000 gallons a day. With a maximum sustained filtered-water production capacity of 155,000,000 gallons a day, the limit of the system is being approached, it was reported.

A breakdown of the budget submitted by the Corps of Engineers [illegible] the following items: $579,- [illegible] to operate and maintain the Washington Aqueduct, including the employment of 12 additional workmen; $155,000 for replacements at the aqueduct; $20,000 to carry to completion the investigations and report for an increased water supply; shops and storehouses for Dalecarlia and McMillan, $84,000; conversion of Dalecarlia hydroelectric station into an emergency raw-water pump station, $75,000; $65,000 for protective fences at the plants, and $490,000 for the new 20,000,000-gallon reservoir.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra collaborates with Fortune Gallo Wednesday night in a performance of Bizet's "Carmen" at the Potomac Watergate under the direction of Giuseppe Bamboschek. Cast of characters:

Carmen ..... Coe Glade
Jose ..... Sydney Rayner
Escamillo ..... Mario Valle
Micaela ..... Laura Triggiani
Zuniga ..... Harold Kravitt
Frasquita ..... Myra Manning
Mercedes ..... Charlotte Bruno
Remendado .... Francesco Curci
Dancairo ..... Abrasha Robofski
Morales ..... Francis Scott

True to its perennial charm for the operatic public, Bizet's "Carmen," presented last night by Fortune Gallo and the National Symphony Orchestra, drew to the Potomac Watergate one of the largest audiences of the summer. The estimate of the number of thousands who crowded the steps and the terrace, fringed the parapets of the bridge and the river road, and listened from moored canoes is best left to those skilled in that kind of observation. No treachery of weather marred the occasion, for the air was cool enough to make a wrap comfortable, and a clear sky maintained the summer record of unpostponed performances.

To Fortune Gallo go one's compliments for his staging of the opera under handicaps warranted to drive an impresario to distraction. With the cooperation of his reliable company of singers, who adapted themselves to a shallow stage and other theatrical inadequacies, he put on a performance that had snap and dramatic conviction. Not the least of the inconveniences was the predicament of the singers, who could not always hear the orchestra, and if they were occasionally a little off key in the first act, they were not to be blamed.

Nevertheless, the enjoyment of the music lovers, as in previous productions, was enhanced by hearing the instrumental score played with the full orchestral resonance and color. Too often in the theater the balance tips the other way, and a small orchestra leaves many beauties undisclosed. The National Symphony, though unoperatic in its training, is learning the technique rapidly, and its reading of Bizet's music, under guidance of Giuseppe Bamboschek, was eminently satisfactory.

Coe Glade was an interesting impersonator of Carmen and her voice met the requirements of the taxing tessitura which demands both an impassioned darkness in the lower register and a clear sonority in the upper. Her study of the character has evidently been thorough, and her histrionic ability put her points over effectively. In some of her readings of the role she reminded one of Alice Gentle, the best Carmen that America has yet produced.

Laura Triggiani, who had the thankless part of Micaela, disclosed a youthful voice of much promise. She sang with lyrical purity and with a fluency of phrasing that augurs well for her future. Her voice is accurately placed, sustained steadily on the breath, and projected with surety of intonation.

Sydney Rayner as Jose and Harold Kravitt as Zuniga maintained the vocal standard they had pleasantly established in the earlier production of "Faust." Mario Valle, a seasoned member of the San Carlo troupe, made a vigorous Escamillo. The other roles were taken by Francesco Curci, Abrasha Robofski, Francis Scott, Myra Manning and Charlotte Bruno.

In idle speculation, one wonders if Bizet would have made "Carmen" better than it is, had he not been hampered by his librettists, Meilhac and Halevy, and pestered by the temperamental singers who "created" two of the principal roles at the primiere. The librettists toned down Merimee's portrait of Carmen, and from a single phrase in the novel, which mentioned that Jose's experience of women had been confined to "blue-skirted, pig-tailed village girls," elaborated the colorless part of Micaela.

2 D. C. Youths Inducted In Notre Dame U. Order

Two District youths, formerly classmates at St. Joseph's Parochial School here, recently received habits of the Order of the Congregation of the Holy Cross at Notre Dame University, where they have been seminarians.

They are Charles R. Schroth, C. S. C., son of Mrs. Rose L. Schroth, of 1430 Rhode Island avenue northwest, and whose home parish is St. Matthew's Cathedral, and Joseph W. Bickel, son of Mrs. Mary Bickel, 3507 W place northwest. The latter is a former altar boy of Holy Trinity Catholic Church, Georgetown.

'Quiz of Two Cities' Dedicated to Red Cross

It will be Washington versus Baltimore tonight in the "Quiz of Two Cities," a special radio program dedicated to the coming Red Cross Roll Call.

Teams of four members from the Red Cross chapters here and in Baltimore will answer questions for cash prizes, which will go to the respective chapters.

Washington's representatives will be Mrs. Morton T. Tice, Mrs. Farnham Blair, Earl A. Nash and Sidney R. Gould. The program will be heard over WMAL from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

Open House Tomorrow At Fort Lincoln Camp

Boys and girls who have attended the Georgetown Children's House Day Camp at Fort Lincoln for the last seven weeks will hold a final-day "roundup" and open house for their parents and friends at the camp tomorrow.

The event, which closes the camp for the summer, will include demonstrations of outdoor arts learned by the campers. Visitors will be invited to partake of "pioneer style" refreshments, cooked out of doors by the campers. First-aid and athletic demonstrations and a puppet show with handmade puppets and props created by the girl campers also are on the program.

Protection Asked For Leaflet Vendors

Hugh Miller, chairman of the Washington Committee for Democratic Action, yesterday called upon Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to protect the constitutional rights of leaflet distributors.

In a letter to the police superintendent, made public by the committee, Miller objected to police action during a free-for-all Monday night in front of a Southeast theater. The melee resulted when a crowd of youths objected to the distribution of anticonscription leaflets by two young women and a young man, took the circulars away from them and threw the papers into the air.

Hike Welfare Budget Fifth, Bondy Asks

Director Estimates $9,034,367 Will Be Required for Needy During Next Year

Care of the District's 19,500 public welfare charges will require an outlay next year of $9,034,367, according to estimates submitted yesterday to the Commissioners by Robert E. Bondy, welfare director.

This is a 20 per cent, or $1,500,827 increase over current appropriations.

The total figure does not include a request for $150,000 for a revolving fund to set up a food stamp plan which was recommended earlier this year but lost in the Congressional shuffle for District funds.

Expansion of Facilities

Expansion of the physical facilities under the welfare board's wing would account for the largest single item among the increases requested. This amounts to $893,100.

Features of this capital improvement plan are: $185,000 to construct and equip a new Receiving Home for Children; $64,000 for medical equipment and inclosed exercise yard at the City Jail; $119,100 for an infirmary for the Workhouse at Occoquan; $150,000 for construction of dormitories at the District Training School; $250,000 for a Negro women's ward at Blue Plains; $40,000 for a new administration building and nurses' quarters, and $101,000 for power plant and equipment for the Home for Aged and Infirm.

Relief Cases Rise

The welfare director stated there were 2,131 unemployed families on relief on June 1, 1940, although this present budget provides money for only 1,900 families and single persons. The budget for general relief has been $900,000 since July 1, 1938 and has not been increased since that time despite the fact that the number of relief cases has continued to grow.

During the recent public hearings which the board of public welfare held on this proposed budget, testimony was made that $3,000,000 would be required to adequately care for the District's needy.

Bondy's new budget would provide jobs for 215 persons, which would increase the cost of personal services by $338,284. Of this amount, $78,000 is included to place the penal institutions on a 44-hour work week.

D. C. Man Found In Detroit River Called a Suicide

Rudolph Lindner, 32-year-old Washington stenographer, whose body, with hands and feet shackled, was found Tuesday in the Detroit, (Mich.) River was termed a suicide yesterday by Wayne County Coroner Albert A. Hughes, the Associated Press reported.

Dr. Hughes said he found no indication of injury and that relatives informed him that Lindner had been despondent. An autopsy revealed that Lindner died of drowning.

Relatives arrived in Detroit from Washington yesterday and identified the body.

The dead man, an employe of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., had been vacationing at a camp in northern Michigan. He made his home here at 3801 Wheeler road southeast.

Communication Group Will Be Fingerprinted

The Federal Communications Commission announced yesterday that more than 30,000 cable and telegraph company workers will be fingerprinted, photographed and asked to file their citizenship status in connection with the national defense program.

Employes in divisions handling international messages or those who have access to information transmitted internationally are the only ones affected by the order, the FCC said.

Greenbelters Act to Form Own Village

Those Precluded by Income Limit to Set Up Co-op Town

Plans for a cooperative community of private home owners at Greenbelt, Md., were announced yesterday when papers of incorporation for the project were filed with the Recorder of Deeds in District Court.

Sanctioned by the Farm Security Administration, the movement was started by a group of Greenbelters whose incomes now exceed the maximum permitted by the Government for residents of the low-cost housing development.

Phillip W. Austin, general counsel for the incorporating group, said approximately 200 homes at $3,500 each will be erected on a tract of land adjacent to the Greenbelt town proper. The land, he added, will remain under control of the Government and will be rented under a 99-year lease.

More than 90 pledges to build have been received, Austin said, and construction work is expected to begin within a year. The cooperative venture will be capitalized at $25,000 with 2,500 shares of stock selling at $10 par value.

A down payment of 10 per cent will be required on each home, he said, with the balance amortized at the usual FHA rates. Austin said the project is designed as a community development primarily for present residents but outside persons who desire lots will be permitted to buy.

Applicants, Austin said, will be given a year to pay the 10 per cent initial guarantee. The new community, he added, will abide by existing ordinances of the Town of Greenbelt.

Each member of the cooperative group will have one vote in administration of the enterprise no matter how many shares he owns. Residents of the cooperative also will have a say in community affairs of the original Greenbelt township, Austin said.

The articles of incorporation listed the following as director and incorporators:

Charles H. Dufton, 1617 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Dayton W. Hull, 48B Crescent road, Greenbelt; Colin O. Skinner, 7 Forestway, Greenbelt; Walter R. Volckhausen, 6K Hillside road, Greenbelt, and Ernest J. Wolfe, 421 College avenue, College Park, Md.

Austin said the proposed project would not be effected by reported negotiations to transfer the original Greenbelt property to private ownership.

Patrons Seek Personality At D.C. Library

Few Desire Knowledge But Majority Want To Win Friends

Self-development—how to win friends and influence people—is a major concern of patrons of the Washington Public Library, who apply to Mrs. Helen Steinbarger, adviser in adult education, for guidance in their reading.

Mrs. Steinbarger interviews an average of ten persons daily in an effort to help them find books to meet their needs. Some desire texts that will enable them to study for advancement in their jobs. Others want to supply a lack in their educational background by reading history and travel books—many like to get their history through biographies—but a majority of those who come to her are interested in applied psychology, she says.

The ages of readers who seek Mrs. Steinbarger's help range from 25 to 40.

In addition to the service given individual patrons, the adult education division of the library sends collections of books on special subjects to adult education classes in the various high schools and night schools. Mrs. Steinbarger addresses women's clubs and, each fall, talks before the Americanization School. Later students from there are brought to the library, where she shows them how to make use of its services and prepares a special display of books for them.

Mrs. Steinbarger, who has been with the Washington Public Library since 1924 as readers' adviser, has been in charge of the adult education division since 1937. At this time, a little room on the first floor was assigned her for interviews.

Yesterday, she left for nearby Maryland to spend two days of her vacation. She will return to Washington to do sightseeing in the new buildings of the Capital during the remainder of her holiday—practicing what she preaches as to the value of adult education.

D. C. Needs 282 Police, Brown Says

Force Has Been Outgrown by City, Chief Explains to Burglary Victim

Washington needs 282 more policemen to patrol the city as it was patrolled years ago, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, declared yesterday.

His statement answered the almost inevitable question of a typical Washington merchant whose business place has been burglarized: "Where are the police when these crooks operate?"

A Post reporter asked the question of the police chief yesterday. The same question had been posed by Maurice Robbin, proprietor of a downtown camera shop and a recent victim.

Robbin's complaint was that his store was entered sometime last Saturday night or early Sunday morning and $800 worth of merchandise, including 18 movie cameras, stolen. He reasoned that, with such a load, the thieves either made several trips or packed the entire loot into a large crate and carted it away.

His store is well lighted, Robbin said, and is only a few doors from the city's busiest intersection. How, he asked, can burglars operate in such fashion without being detected?

Maj. Brown said he has heard the same lament from scores of businessmen.

"In 1930," the police superintendent said, "there were 1,262 policemen on the force to protect 486,869 persons. Today the force numbers 1,437 and the Census Bureau tells us there are 663,153 persons living in the District.

"Proportionately, to give the same amount of police protection per person that was given ten years ago, the city should have 282 more policemen," he said.

Brown said that he requested 100 additional patrolmen in his budget estimate for 1941, hearing on which will be held next Monday and Tuesday.

2 Bandits, Armed With Rusty Gun, Get $179 in Holdup

Two white men, armed with one rusty revolver, robbed the cash register of Dikeman's Restaurant, 609 Fifteenth street, of $179 at 12:45 a. m. today.

First the men ordered coffee. Then one of them went to the washroom and, when he came out, nodded to his companion still seated at the counter.

The bandit at the counter thrust the revolver at Irvin Compton, 25, of 1210 Buchanan street northeast, and demanded "all the money you've got." When Compton, alone in the restaurant with the exception of two busboys, was slow in complying, the bandit cursed and shouted:

"Hurry up or I'll kill you."

Compton handed over the cash and the men left.

'Dutch' Leonard Blanks Browns for Nats, 3-0

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We are startled to note that Rip Radcliff, of the Browns, is still leading the American League hitters, and by a comfortable margin. He may win the $500 cash award that goes to the batting champion, despite this department. We thought we had disposed of Radcliff as a batting title threat a month ago when we inscribed a very flattering piece about his hitting ability.

POVICH

But the Povich curse must be losing its sting, because there Radcliff is, still hitting a lusty .360 and leading his closest challenger by 13 points. In the past, one paen of praise from this department has always been tantamount to the kiss of death and the object thereof promptly makes a bum of himself and us. The pull of gravity is trivial compared to the load an athlete carries when we are on his side.

It wasn't advancing age or poor hitting or weak pitching that stopped the Yankees this season. It was Povich. When we labeled the Yanks as invincible and conceded 'em another pennant, it was too much even for the Yanks to overcome. They promptly fell into the second division, playing like everything we said that they were not. After we acclaimed 'em as the super team, there wasn't any need to break up the Yanks. They simply fell apart.

Back in May when Frankie Hayes, of the Athletics, was leading the league's hitters we felt constrained to note in print that here, at last, was a catcher who could win the league batting championship and probably would. We hardly reached print with that deduction when Hayes went hitless in eight times at bat in a doubleheader the same afternoon.

A bit later in the season, Lou Finney, of the Red Sox, barged into the lead and we made proper note of that with the entirely gratuitous inference that Finney would probably be the 1940 batting champion. Within the next week, Finney lost 15 points and was benched by the Red Sox in favor of Dominic DiMaggio, who wasn't hitting .300. DiMaggio was the guy we described last winter as the likeliest looking rookie of the year. He couldn't break into the Boston lineup until July.

But our greatest feat occurred in the case of Heinie Manush several years ago. Manush had hit in 40 consecutive games for the Nats and was threatening George Sisler's record of 42 games. On a morning in Chicago we speculated favorably on Manush's chances to tie Sisler's record and predicted that he would hit in 50 straight games. That afternoon he made a bum out of us by failing to get the ball out of the infield in six times at bat in an extra-inning game.

When the Yankees made a midseason surge this year, winning six out of seven games and pulling themselves into the first division, we were on top of the situation. "That thunder in the rear is the Yankees," we wrote, "they're coming along to take it all, including the pennant." We fixed 'em. They lost their next six games.

At least one of our predictions we assumed was foolproof. That one concerned Bob Feller. He wouldn't win the 30 games that Cleveland writers were claiming he would win this season. We said they were nuts, or at least imaginative. Big league pitchers didn't win 30 games these days. Well, the other day Feller won his twenty-second and is now even money to get his 30.

The Cleveland club would fold, we ventured, if the going got tough in late season and they had a chance to win. That's all the Indians needed. The other day in Boston with the Red Sox leading, 5 to 2, and beating Feller, the team we said didn't have any courage rose up with seven runs in the eighth inning to win the ball game. We want a series cut.

When Joe DiMaggio broke in in 1936 and was acclaimed the rookie of the year, we dissented. With the St. Louis Browns that season, a young outfielder named Beau Bell also broke in and, in fact, outhit DiMaggio by 15 points. He was a better ballplayer than DiMaggio, we inferred. The next year Bell failed to hit .300 and was traded a bit later to the Tigers.

The other day in the Boston pressbox, with the Nats trailing by a run in the ninth, two out and a man on base, we softly cursed Bucky Harris for not inserting a pinch-hitter for Jimmy Bloodworth. On the next pitch, Bloodworth lifted the ball far over the fence for a home run.

We are mentioning all these things just to illustrate that Radcliff must be a great hitter if he is still up there after the nice things we said about him earlier in the season. Maybe it's the death of the Povich curse. Maybe Radcliff didn't read what we wrote. Maybe he's just stubborn and doesn't know when he's licked.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 21.—SPORTIN' AROUND:

The anti-Vitt feeling on the pennant-bound Cleveland Indians is still smoldering. Buck Newsom, the garrulous Tiger, accosted Bobby Feller during the last Detroit-Cleveland series and brayed, "What's the matter with you fellows? Why ain't you fired Vitt lately?" Feller replied, seriously, "He's acting all right, for a change. But he'll probably be worse than ever, some day" . . . Incredible, that a small stone has ended Bimelech's racing career. Yet one such pebble, jammed up under the shoe of El Chico, ended the racing days and the very life of Bim's predecessor as 2-year-old champ . . . Ed Beinor and Joe Kuharich, who played shoulder to shoulder in the Notre Dame line for two years, will die for dear dear old Dan Topping U. this fall . . . Lefty Grove, aged 40 and out for the year with a broken bone in his foot, will come back next year seeking the eight victories which will give him a lifetime total of 300. Eddie Plank is the only lefty who ever won that many.

CONSIDINE

Baltimore doctors were unable to find a remedy for the shoulder injury of Monte Pearson, nor could the X-ray find the trouble. The docs told Pearson he might pitch tomorrow or perhaps not this year . . . With little or no fanfare, Jimmy Foxx became the second greatest producer of home runs in baseball history last week, dislodging Lou Gehrig. Jimmy is only 228 homers behind Babe Ruth. Just a breeze.

We have been made uneasy of late by a rash of data on snipes, and I don't mean the kind you hunt for with an open sack. Ran smack-dab into the eighth annual North Atlantic Snipe Championship at Lake Mohawk, N. J., this week.

A snipe is the smallest racing sailboat. There are about 4,000 of them registered in the world, most of them in this country but plenty in England, Italy and Canada. They're limited to 15¼ feet in length and 118 square feet of sail, which isn't much as it sounds. The price is limited to $350 for everything, and one of the officials at these "poor man's America Cup" races is an appraiser who has the power to disqualify any boat whose doo-dads appear to him to have made the affair worth more than $350. They're as frisky as a one-wheel bike on a cobblestone road, and kids seem to be able to handle them better than adults. Some of the contestants in the North Atlantic championship were 13 or 14 years old, and really expert sailors.

Sixty per cent of all snipes in existence are homemade, and a lot more of them must still be in cellars, while their builders ponder the problem of getting them out without taking down the house.

You'd think the professional golfers would strain a point this year and invite their colleague, Lawson Little, United States Open champ, to play in the Professional Golfers Association Tournament, wouldn't you? The event comes off next week at Hershey, Pa., but Little is barred because he hasn't worked around a golf shop long enough . . . Edgar J. Maskery, of Haledon, N. J., recently received a medal for the 220-yard dash he won 40 years ago while in school. Seems that the jeweler who had it 40 years ago sold his business before delivering it and it has been bouncing around since then, eluding Maskery's efforts to get it.

Here's a little fodder for the perennial Cobb vs. Ruth debates: The two immortals finished their careers with almost the same number of total bases on hits. Ruth's hits totaled 5,893 bases, to Cobb's 5,863. Other comparisons: Cobb scored 2,244 times to Ruth's 2,174. Cobb made 4,191 hits to Ruth's 2,873, and that superiority included 724 doubles, 297 triples and 118 home runs. Ruth hit 506 doubles, 136 triples and the appalling total of 714 homers. Ruth stole 123 bases during his 22 years, and his stick average was .342. Cobb stole 892 bases in 24 years and averaged .367 at the plate. He quit with 90 records; Ruth with about 40. Cobb's income during his playing days totaled $400,000; Ruth's was fixed by Frank Menke at $1,076,447. Cobb's investments made him a millionaire; Ruth quit with little actual cash, but with an annuity that will pay him $10,000 a year for life.

Losing Streak Broken After Five Losses

Dutch Walks Only Two, Strikes Out Seven, Makes Two Of Nats' 8 Hits

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Dutch Leonard and his knuckle ball stopped the Browns—and the Nats' five-game losing streak—yesterday. The stout master of the dipsy-doodle pitch needed only one run to win the ball game but the Nats fetched him three and it was a 3-0 shutout.

He was back in the groove with his knuckle ball after his effectiveness had deserted him in his last two starts. Leonard walked only two batters yesterday—none in the last seven innings—and he struck out seven. He had a large afternoon of it. He made two of the Nats' eight hits and scored one of their runs.

It was Leonard's second straight shutout of the Browns. Back in late July he blanked them, 4 to 0, in St. Louis, allowing eight hits then, as yesterday.

Nats Get Two in Ninth

The Nats won the ball game by blitzing lefthanded Howard Mills for two runs in the first inning, aided by the big blond southpaw's lack of control. Mills walked one run across the plate. He steadied thereafter and pitched clever ball until Willis Hudlin relieved him in the eighth, but the Browns never recovered from that two-run first-inning.

George Case, who has been battling a batting slump for ten days, greeted Mills with a slashing single off Third Baseman Cliff's glove, and the Nats' two runs were in the making. Buddy Lewis delivered a single to right field and Case moved to third. Lewis stole second and Mills then filled the bases, with none as yet out, by walking Johnny Welaj.

After getting the count of two strikes and one ball against Cecil Travis, Mills walked him on three more wide pitches and a cheap run trotted hime. Jimmy Bloodworth produced the second run with a fly to Radcliff in left field and Johnny Berardino averted further damage for Mills by starting a double play on Myer's ground ball.

Leonard Singles

The Nats picked up their third run in the fifth inning after Mills had completed three innings of scoreless pitching and had two batters out in the fifth. Leonard himself set the run in motion with a single to left field. He moved to second when Case drew a walk, and Lewis moved them home with a single into left field.

It was no breeze for Leonard, despite his shutout triumph. The Browns got only one man as far as third base, but they had runners on base in every inning except the

Betting Sets Record At Marlboro Opening

Crowd of 8,000 Wagers $116,350; Butterman, Fouled, Gets Purse In Feature on Disqualification

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 21.—The disqualification of a heavily played horse in favor of a long shot and a new opening day betting record were the high points as racing returned to nearby Prince Georges County for a ten-day stand. The ruling of the stewards came in the Upper Marlboro Purse, the feature event of the day, and brought victory to Mrs. N. E. Stanton's Butterman, after the son of Peter Hastings had finished second in the sprint of 5½ furlongs.

Mrs. M. V. Daly's Seneschal, heavily played by the crowd of 8,000, came to the finish line a length and a half in advance of Butterman with Ewart Johnson's Cat's Cradle in third position. But entering the stretch, Seneschal came over and bumped Butterman. Jockey Albert Vesseli, riding the latter, ran up to the stewards to complain as soon as he had weighed in.

n addition to the bumping claim, Vesseli displayed a bruised face, which he said was caused by Jockey George Watson's whip. The stewards called Watson and heard his side of the story and then began revising the order of finish, of course eliminating Seneschal.

Butterman, moved into the winning position, paid a $18.30 mutuel. The majority of the fans failed to give him more than passing notice in the line-up for the race because of a dismal showing in his recent outing at Cumberland. The winning time

Customs Service Shooters Capture Morgenthau Cup

By the Associated Press

Aided by crack marksmen from Hawaii and Puerto Rico, a six-man pistol team representing the Customs Service won the Henry Morgenthau silver cup yesterday in the fifth annual Treasury Department target competition.

George Roberts, of Honolulu, and Jose F. Rua, of San Juan, each scored 291 out of a possible 300. The winning team scored 1,760 points of a possible 1,800.

Individual high scores of 295 were posted by Leonard J. Trones, Seattle, Wash., and Joseph A. Sorrells, Nogales, Ariz. Charles E. Gardner, El Paso, Tex., and Carlton F. Bain, Fort Fairfield, Me., each scored 294.

Roberts said if he scored high today in the individual target match he might compete in the National Pistol Matches September 1 to 14 at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Billy Soose Decisions Tony Zale

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Billy Soose, Farrell, Pa., wrecker of champions, defeated Tony Zale, Gary, Ind., recognized by the National Boxing Association as middleweight champion, in a blistering 10-round overweight match here tonight.

Only the fact that the bout was fought over the 160-pound middleweight limit prevented the former collegian from Penn State from winning the title. He previously had conquered Ken Overlin, recognized champion by New York and California, in another overweight match. Zale scaled 161 pounds and Soose tipped the beam at 162.

The decision of the two judges and Referee Joe McNamara was unanimous in favor of the 23-year-old Farrell boxing master. The verdict also met with the howling approval of the 7,000 fans.

The deadly punching Zale, making his first start since knocking out Al Hostak, of Seattle, for the N. B. A. title, won the first two rounds with terrific punches to the body but thereafter met his master at boxing skill.

Starting with the third, Soose started popping a snakey long left in Zale's reddened face and began moving around the "Blond Buster", from Gary to keep him off balance and not allow him to get set. In the fourth, Soose started hooking lefts to the head and jabbing, completely outboxing Zale.

From then on, with the exception of the ninth round, Soose, boxing cautiously and smartly, kept plopping tantalizing lefts into Zale's face often jabbing five or six times without a return.

He succeeded in tying up Zale's body punches by either blocking them or moving quickly out of danger.

Mack and Boudreau Lead Tribe to Victory

Bosox Bow, 4-2, to Mel Harder; Rookie Second-Base Combination Sparkle in Field, Also Lead Hitting Attack Against Boston

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 21.—Snappy hitting and fielding by Ray Mack and Lou Boudreau, Cleveland's young second-base combination, and Mel Harder's effective hurling in the clinches gave the American League leaders a 4-2 decision today over the Boston Red Sox.

The victory stretched to five and a half games the Indians' margin over the second-place Detroit Tigers, who lost to the New York Yankees.

Mack's two-run homer in the second inning sent the Indians into a lead that never was headed, and Boudreau drove in one of their other two runs. The youngsters also broke up attempted Red Sox rallies by participating in three double plays.

Oscar Vitt, the Cleveland manager, was banished at the start of the sixth inning by Umpire Moriarty for protesting a called ball on Jimmy Foxx. It was Vitt's first enforced exit of the season.

Harder allowed 14 hits, at least one in every inning, but bore down when it counted and left 12 Red Sockers stranded on the bases, again at least one in every inning. Only one of the Boston blows went for extra bases, a homer by Dom DiMaggio in the seventh.

Fritz Ostermueller, starting and losing hurler for the third-place Sox, deserved a better fate, striking out eight and allowing only six hits in eight innings, but his teammates couldn't overcome the damage done by Mack's homer.

Making his first big league appearance, Bill Fleming, late of Hollywood in the Pacific Coast League, replaced Osty in the ninth and was found for one hit.

The Red Sox played without the services of Jim Tabor, third baseman, who probably will be out for the season with appendicitis. He collapsed just before the game and was taken to a hospital. Charley Gelbert, obtained this week from Washington, took his place and got one hit.

Karush II Leads As Coast Boats Are Off Slowly

By the Associated Press

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 21.—Aided by a sudden gust of wind, Charles de Cardenas, of Cuba, maneuvered his Karush II to a comfortable lead today at the start of the second race of the International Star Class Championship.

The Karush was away to a lead of four boat lengths and, because of lack of wind, the advantage was regarded as substantial. Charles Ross, of Puget Sound, Wash., was second in the Cene, and Harry C. Uhler, of Waikiki, Hawaii, third in the Kuuipo III.

The wind velocity was only about three miles and officials expressed doubt the 18 craft could finish within the required time of three and one-half hours unless a stiffer breeze arose. The ocean off Point Loma was calm.

Charlotte Beaten

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 21 (AP).—Richmond's Colts pounded the offerings of Charlotte's pitcher, Thuman, tonight for 11 hits and an 8-3 decision in the series opener.

Chisox Move Into Stadium Today; Face Masterson

The Chicago White Sox, battling to regain a first division berth, move into Griffith Stadium this afternoon for a three-game stay. Manager Jimmy Dykes' club is a game behind the fourth-place Yankees and only two games to the rear of the third-place Red Sox.

Manager Bucky Harris has indicatd that Walter Masterson would be the Nats' pitcher in the series opener. Jack Knott, tall righthander, will pitch for the White Sox.

Outfielder Gerald Walker, who suffered a leg injury while running out a hit on Tuesday, is not expected to rejoin the Nats' lineup until Saturday.

'Skins Hold Intra-Squad Game

It Will Be East Against West In Exhibition

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 21.—Civil war will flare here tomorrow night in the Redskins organization when Skins from the East meet Skins from the West in a charity exhibition that will be the first actual test of Coach Ray Flaherty's 1940 squad.

Capt. Turk Edwards, Western stars despite a defensive advantage in the line and a passing superiority in the backfield today were considered the underdogs.

Flaherty's selection of Eastern stars includes the shiftiest and speediest backs on the entire squad and the weight disadvantage in the line will be offset by the presence of such luminaries as Wee Willie Wilkin, Bo Russell and Bill Young, tackles.

Edwards, line coach for the Redskins this year, will kick for his Westerners and will operate his team from a double wingback formation while Flaherty will use a flanker system that will keep his eleven wide open for a large amount of "razzle dazzle" passing.

Flaherty's passing hopes will be pinned on Frank Filchock, Dick Todd and Jimmy German, while the Westerners will have Slingin' Sammy Baugh and the two promising rookie halfbacks Roy Zimmerman, from San Jose State, and Bob Seymour, from Oklahoma University.

Ernie Lain, 230-pound draftee from Rice, will probably have his fate decided by tonight's performance. The beefy fullback passer has been developing slowly but a spectacular performance saved him from being cut from the squad when Flaherty starts wielding the axe that will leave 12 men out in the cold.

Rookies will see heavy duty, Flaherty said, and it may be that tonight will determine the status of a few of the veterans who are on the Redskins' coach 1940 "doubtful" list. Final decision on cutting the squad of 45 to 33 will be made after the second intra-squad game in Spokane a week from tonight, however.

The West's starting backfield will be Baugh, Ernie Pinckert, Jimmy Johnston and Ed Justice, while Flaherty's choices are Jimmy German, Jay Turner, Don Irwin and Andy Farkas.

In the consolation finals, Mary Rountree defeated Mary Howard, 6—2, 6—0.

Brewers' Colliflower Hurls 1-Hit Victory Over Cameo, 3-0

3,000 Witness Second Game Of Play-off

Furnituremen's Hahn Gets Lone Single Off Heurich's Steady Hurler

Big Ed Colliflower, steady right-hand hurler of the Heurich Brewers, stepped out of his "steady" role and pitched himself a downright brilliant game against Cameo Furniture yesterday in the playoff for the championship of The Washington Post Industrial League.

Nearly 3,000 fans turned out on the Ellipse to see Ed shut out the Cameos, 3-0, and even the three-game series at one game for each of the torrid rivals. Final and conclusive action, with a berth in the D. C. Championship Tournament at stake, will take place on the South Ellipse at 4:30 today.

One lonely hit the slugging Cameos registered off Colliflower as they suffered their first blanking of the league season. That hit, oddly enough, came off the bat of the losing pitcher, Tommy Hahn.

Hahn Singles

After five hitless innings, Hahn ruined Colliflower's chances of a perfect performance in the sixth when he singled cleanly over Third Baseman Hershberger's head. It was just another futile threat, however, Hahn was one of the nine men the second-half champions left stranded on the base paths.

There was nothing flukish about the first Heurich run, which eventually won the game. Mack Posnack singled in the second frame, went to second on Huck Stahl's sacrifice and scored on Cabell's single. It was that simple.

Other Brewer runs, however, weren't quite as deserved. In the seventh inning First Baseman Jack James, of Cameo, almost single-handedly handed Heurich its second run. He muffed a throw that put Stahl on first, saw Cabell walked and then fumbled Dick Knight's grounder until the latter reached first and Stahl romped home.

Barry Safe on Error

Another Cameo error, this time by Shortstop Kenny McQuinn, launched Heurich's eighth inning. Pepco Barry was safe at first, sacrificed to second by Murphy and doubled home by Posnack. The latter, incidentally, was the batting star of the day with three hits in four official times up.

D. C. Sandlot Tourney Plans Announced

Final arrangements for the District baseball championship tournament, which will decide the local sandlot nine to compete in the national meet in Birmingham, Ala., on September 5, were announced last night by the D. C. chapter of the National Amateur Baseball Federation.

Three teams will be in competition, winners of titles in The Washington Post Industrial, Militia and D. C. Government leagues.

Hostilities will get under way Monday, August 26, if the playoff for the U. S. Government League title is complete at that time. Naval Air and Pepco begin a three-game battle for that honor today.

Scene of the tourney will be the South Ellipse, where stands will be erected later this week. A slight charge will be made for seats to help defray expenses of the winning team at Birmingham. Each game will start at 4 p. m.

In the opener, St. Elizabeth's nine, Militia League victor will meet either Heurich Brewers or Cameo Furniture, depending upon which wins their final battle for the Post Industrial League crown today. The winner of that game will play the Government League winner in the second game, and the final meeting will be between the Government League victor and the loser of the opening game.

Six-Run Rally In Fifth Wins For Cards, 7-5

Dodgers Bow, Now Trail Cincinnati By 5½ Games

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 21.—A sensational six-run outburst in the fifth inning helped the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-5 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers and a clean sweep of the series.

That left the Dodgers 5½ games back of the first-place Cincinnati Reds, who lost a 5-4 decision to the New York Giants in an 11-inning thriller.

The Dodgers went ahead by 3-1 in their half of the fifth by bunching three of their seven hits for two runs. But the Cardinals came back in the same frame with five hits, a stolen base and three walks to score six runs. Their first tally came in the opening inning when Johnny Mize doubled to score Pepper Martin.

The Dodgers tried to make a game of it in the seventh when they tallied twice on Babe Phelps' double and Dixie Walker's sixth home run of the season—but that was as close as they ever got.

Vito Tamulis, who started, and was relieved by Luke Hamlin in the fifth, was credited with the loss. Wes Flowers and Hugh Casey also shared the mound duties. Carl Doyle, Brooklyn cast-off, who was the third of three Card pitchers to see action, got credit for his second victory of the season.

Tigers Bow to Yanks, 6-5, on Forced-in Run

Benton Walks Dickey With Bases Loaded In Ninth for Winning Margin; Detroit Deadlocks Score in Last Inning

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 20.—Al Benton, fourth Detroit pitcher to face the Yankees, tossed four consecutive balls to Catcher Bill Dickey with the bases full in the ninth inning to give the Yanks a 6-5 victory and a clean sweep of the series.

The Tigers had tied the score with two runs in their half of the inning to climax an uphill battle against the hurling of Spud Chandler, seeking his eighth victory of the season. But Johnny Murphy came in to quell the rally and get credit for the game.

The Yankees got away to what looked like an insurmountable lead in the first frame when George Selkirk connected for his fourteenth homer of the season with the bases loaded. That started Hal Newhouser, Detroit's first mound choice, on his way to the showers.

With the score tied, Red Rolfe, Yankee third baseman, opened the final frame with a single to center. And Tommy Henrich beat out a hit to Benton. Joe DiMaggio forced Henrich, Rolfe taking third on the play. Selkirk was intentionally passed and then Benton's control deserted him and he walked Dickey, forcing Rolfe across with the winning run.

Rookie's Pinch Homer Wins For Phils, 7-5

Cubs Lose After Bonura Ties Score In Ninth With Circuit

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Charley Frye, a rookie and by trade a right-handed pitcher, stepped up as a pinch hitter in the tenth inning today and slapped out a home run with one on base to give the Philadelphia Phils a 7-to-5 victory and an even split in the two-game series with Chicago's Cubs.

Zeke Bonura had tied the score for the Cubs and sent the game into extra innings by homering with one on in the ninth. He also accounted for two doubles in the Cub collection of 12 hits off three Philly hurlers—Ike Pearson, Clyde Smoll and Syl. Johnson—but Chicago at no time held the scoring advantage.

The Phils counted their first five runs off Bill Lee, knocking him from the box in the third inning. Jake Mooty, Charley Root and Ken Raffensberger followed with Clay Bryant, out all season with a sore arm, pitching to the last batter in the tenth. Frye's homer came off Raffensberger after the Phils had been held scoreless from the third inning.

Chisox Bow To Beckman, A's Win, 3-0

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 21.—Bill Beckman's five-hit pitching gave the Athletics a 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox today.

Beckman didn't let a single White Sox get beyond first base in winning his sixth game of the season. Johnny Rigney matched him with a five-hitter, but was less effective in the pinches.

The A's scored twice in the first inning and once in the fifth. Beckman had a no-hitter for five and two-thirds innings, which Jackie Hayes spoiled with a Texas League single. Later Hayes got another single to pace the Chicago hitters.

Bessie Will Do Her Rooting From The HoosegowNow

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 21 (AP)—Savannah's baseball team must finish its drive for the South Atlantic League pennant without the noisy support of its most enthusiastic fan.

Bessie Howard, 65-year-old negro woman, was a fixture at all the Indians' home games. Clanging a cow bell and whooping madly, she shared attention with the players as she "gave out" for her favorites.

But police became curious about the source of her ticket money. Yesterday Bessie pleaded guilty on a lottery charge, received a 60-day sentence.

Shirley Combs Wins

Baltimore, Aug. 21 (AP)—Shirley Combs, Washington, unseeded entry, defeated Betty Simpson, of Ruxton, seeded No. 4, 6—4, 7—5, to win the Middle Atlantic single tennis championship. Lucia Lhamon and Lucy Tyler, of Annapolis, won the doubles title from Betty Jacob and Anne Cullen, of Washington, 6—2, 7—5.

V. DiMaggio's Double Gives Bucs Victory

Hit Scores Winning Run in Eighth as Bees Bow, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 21.—Vince DiMaggio's eighth-inning double, scoring Arky Vaughan from first base, gave the Pirates their second straight victory over the Boston Bees today, 3 to 2.

Young Ken Heintzelman limited Boston to eight hits with the Bees scoring a run in the second on Phil Masi's infield out and again in the fourth when Masi doubled, scoring Sebastian Sisti. Gene Moore was tagged out at the plate when he also tried to score.

Joe Sullivan, who started for the Bees, walked Frankie Gustine with the bases filled in the third and in the fourth Debs Garms singled home the second run. Dick Coffman, who pitched the last four innings, was charged with the defeat.

Garms, keeping up his sensational batting with two hits in four attempts, boosted his average to .378.

N. Y. Giants Nose Leading Reds in 11th

Witek's Single Earns 5-4 Victory; Rally Accounts for Brown's Second Win of Year

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 21.—The off-again, on-again New York Giants, who seem to function best in a patched-up line-up beat the league-leading Cincinnati Reds, 5-4, in an 11-inning struggle today.

The victory came on Mickey Witek's rousing single that sent Capt. Mel Ott scampering home from second base. That stretched the young infielder's batting streak through 12 games and gave the Giants the series over the Reds, two games to one.

The Giants opened the eleventh with Harry Danning's single, but he was forced by Ott, on an attempted bunt. Ott, however, stole second—his third theft of the series—and then registered on Witek's timely blow.

Reds Took 2-0 Lead

The Reds got away to a 2-0 lead, only to have the Giants knot the count in their half of the seventh by getting two runs off 3 of the 11 hits they managed all afternoon. However, the Reds climbed right back into the van when Bill Werber smashed out a homerun with a mate aboard.

The Giants partly closed the gap with one run in the eighth when fleet-footed Johnny Rucker beat out a drag bunt along the first base line for a hit and then dashed all the way home on Frank Demaree's single to center.

Giants Tied Score

In the ninth, the New Yorkers tied the score when Ott walked and was sent home on Tony Cuccinello's blazing double to deep center.

Hal Schumacher started for the Giants, but retired after the seventh inning after the Reds had done all their scoring. Walter Brown, who blanked the Reds during the last four rounds, got credit for the victory, his second of the season.

Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, seeking his seventh win, pitched to all but the last Giant batter, being relieved then by Joe Beggs, but he had to accept defeat—the third the Giants have pinned on him this season.

Ernie Lombardi homered for the Reds in the sixth.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Tangled Upsets Nasca at Saratoga

Filly Scores Four-Length Victory

Long's Spinaway Winner Runs Poor Third in Feature; Dark Discovery 2d

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Breckinridge Long's Nasca, unbeaten in her four previous starts and regarded as the champion 2-year-old filly, today suffered a stunning setback when she finished a poor third in the thirty-eighth Adirondack Handicap. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Tangled, which chased Nasca home in the recent Spinaway and Schuylerville stakes, won in a romp today by four lengths. John A. Bell, jr.'s, Dark Discovery beat Nasca by two lengths for the place. The time for the 6 furlongs was 1:12 flat.

It was in the Spinaway that Nasca filed claim to the filly title, for Level Best, her arch rival and also unbeaten up to this time, finished third. It was later discovered that Level Best injured her head by bumping into the stall gate. Nasca was a 2-to-5 shot in the field of seven lassies this afternoon and her defeat leaves the filly situation well muddled.

Tangled, paying $12.50 for $2, earned a purse of $3,675 as 9,505 fans looked on.

True Call Loses

Favorite players received their fifth reverse in six races when True Call took a five lengths beating from the $15.10-for-$2 hazard, Miss Ferdinand, in the Speed Boat Handicap, 1-mile event for 3-year-old fillies. The winner, in close quarters until she worked her way between horses for her triumphant stretch run, proved much superior of the five starters.

J. H. (Jock) Whitney, who had a birthday a few days ago, had cause for some slightly belated celebrating when his 2-year-old first starter, Seven Hills, drove to victory in the fourth dash. The chestnut son of Pompey—Oonagh, bred by his owner, is a full brother to Pompoon, star juvenile of 1936.

Seven Hills Is Favorite

On the strength of advance notices, Seven Hills ruled favorite over six other maiden youngsters. He and Hard Jester fought for command into the stretch, where the latter faltered and Maepeace became the challenger.

The Sanford Stud Farm's 14-year-old gray jumper, Golden Meadow, which runs very seldom, was installed favorite in the steeplechase that opened the card. The old fellow apparently has lost some of his "zip," and while he turned in a creditable performance for his first 1940 effort, he was not a match for Mrs. Esther du Pont Weir's Deanslaw. The latter, now undefeated in four starts this year, overtook Golden Meadow in the run from the last jump and scored by a length and a half.

REPEAT, hustled to front of SCARLET FLAME, was steadied after being urged clear, but was put to drive through stretch while holding safe lead. BLENHEIM ROSE was vigorously handled while racing wide and closed on outside fence. CRIMSON LANCER was off slowly and made up much ground. SCARLET FLAME weakened from early hard usage. MARIYAH failed to respond to punishment.

Daily Double, DEODO and REPEAT, Paid $61.70

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:22. Off 3:23. Winner, W. H. Laboyteaux's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRIPHAMMER, $10.70, $5.40, $5.10; IDA TIME, $4.00, $3.60; TWAIN, $4.60.

TRIPHAMMER came between horses to take command with sharp move entering backstretch, drew clear and won with speed in reserve. IDA TIME, off poorly, was in close quarters at first turn, came wide for racing room and closed gamely. TWAIN was hard ridden and was a tiring third. MISS MUD and SLY HEELS were rushed in early stages and faltered.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:54. Off 3:56. Winner, Mrs. N. E. RENSCHAL was rushed while racing with SUN SALVATOR, could not get clear, carried BUTTERMAN out entering stretch, and closed gamely. Vessell's claim of foul against winner was allowed. BUTTERMAN raced wide from start, moved up to challenge pacemaker, was bothered at final turn and closed gamely on outside. CAT'S CRADLE was vigorously handled and was held safe. MISS MAKER jacked racing room at stretch turn and came gamely when clear.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:36½. Winner, W. W. Waters' b. g. Allison-Van Ryn Eliminated in National Doubles Feature

Schroeder, Kramer Halt Veteran Pair

Hunt and Olewine Win in Three Sets; Marble and Palfrey Drop Single Game

By the United Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 21.—Two 19-year-old Californians, Jack Kramer, of Montabello, and Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, brought veterans Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex.—twice former titlists—to journey's end today in the second round of the National Doubles championships at Longwood Cricket Club.

Kramer and Schroeder, playing their first season as a doubles combine, eliminated the Texans in four sets, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4, 9—7. It was the day's best match.

The Kramer-Schroeder tandem, third seeded after victories at Seabright and Southampton, combined blasting placements and an aggressive net game to force Allison and Van Ryn constantly to the base line.

Kramer's bullet service accounted for the decisive games in the last two sets. Schroeder, the Nation's top-ranking junior, covered court brilliantly to back up his heavy-hitting partner.

Allison Ailing

Van Ryn was forced to carry the heavier burden because 38-year-old Allison was slowed by a pulled tendon suffered last week at Newport.

Trailing 2—5 in the fourth set, the former champions rallied with tricky drop shots and dotted-line placements to confuse their inexperienced opponents and draw even at 5—5. But Allison was broken in the fifteenth game, and Kramer uncorked lightning serves to win set and match in the sixteenth.

The unseeded duo, Midshipman Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, and Ted Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., scored a mild upset in defeating Frank Kovacs and Ed Amark, of Oakland, Calif., 6—4, 6—1, 8—6. Hunt's steadiness overcame Kovac's spectacular shot-making ability.

Play continued to run to form with the remaining seeded teams in both the men's and women's divisions advancing to the third round.

The top-seeded team, Frank Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, Okla., trounced Bill Talbert, of Cincinnati, and George Toley, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—0, 6—4, without extending themselves.

Riggs-Van Horn Loaf

Second-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, had plenty of opportunity to loaf in their routine victory over Jack Mahoney, of New York, and Bob Decker, of Boston, 6—2, 6—2, 6—4.

Giant Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., and Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., seeded fourth, dropped only five games in their straight-set conquest of James Moss and Dwight Robinson, of Brookline, 6—0, 6—2, 6—3.

In the women's division, Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, and Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, seeking their fourth national championship, repeated yesterday's record of dropping only one game as they walloped Mrs. John Priser and Audrey Rust, of Philadelphia, 6—1, 6—0.

Top foreign seeds, Valerie Scott and Mary Hardwick, of England, were forced to display top tennis to eliminate Marguerita Madden, of Boston, and Barbara Strohbar, of Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—4.

Cup Regatta Official to Go To Red Bank

Andy Duffy to Sound Out Talent for President's Race Here

Andy Duffy, vice chairman of the outboard division of the President's Cup Regatta race committee, will be dispatched to Red Bank, N. J., Saturday and Sunday for the regatta classic there, R. Aubrey Bogley, chairman, announced yesterday.

Last season the Red Bank regatta was the second largest to the President's Cup event, and Chairman Bogley stated that the country's power boat stars would be on hand again this season.

While at Red Bank, Duffy will continue the policy started by Chairman Bogley of sounding out the talent for the big regatta events here.

Whether the drivers who competed in the Gold Cup races at Northport, L. I., last week will be present depends on the number of entries received, it was learned yesterday. Fred Brown, regatta chairman at Northport, said the Red Bank committee had planned a special race for the Gold Cup and President's Cup stars, including the new champion, Sydney Allen, and his Hotsy Totsy, but the staging of it is contingent, he said, upon the number of entries received.

Meanwhile Chairman Bogley expects a strong field for the President's Cup race, as well as for all of the outboard and inboard events, in which records are expected to fall with monotonous regularity.

Naval Air Nine Wins 2d Half

Naval Air Station nine came into possession of the second-half championship in the U. S. Government League the roundabout way yesterday when it defeated Gas Light, 5-2.

Held to 1-1 deadlocks by Pepco, first-half winner, in two previous attempts to dominate the latter portion of the season, Naval Air was forced to rally strongly to win. It tied the score in the fourth inning with a 2-run spree, and in the sixth bunched the remainder of its runs for the victory.

The Airmen thus go into a three-game playoff for the league title with Pepco at 5 o'clock today on the Ellipse. The winner of two games will enter the Amateur Baseball Federation tournament to decide the city champion.

Stevens and Brownell Win State Pro-Am

Al Houghton's 66 Wins Pro Sweepstakes; Brownell, Mel Shipley, Jock Olmsted Tied in Amateur Play at Manor Club

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Al Houghton's birdie barrage in the pro sweepstakes and a great best-ball 62 by the pro-amateur team of Eddie Stevens and Bobby Brownell shared top honors in the Maryland State Golf Association Tournament yesterday over the Norbeck course.

Houghton won the pro sweepstakes by a three-shot margin with a four under par 66, including six birdies. The Beaver Dam pro hit 15 of the 18 greens in regulation figures and dropped six of the putts, all comparatively short. His only mistakes were on the sixth and ninth holes.

Stevens and Brownell, the latter with a two handicap allowance, won the pro-amateur by just one shot as Houghton and two of his partners, Doug Mattison and S. T. Dale, of Beaver Dam, were next with 63s.

Brownell Stars

Brownell was the individual star of the winning team, but Stevens was a perfect partner. Bobby matched par figures with a 35-35—70, and used his two handicap strokes to advantage, one for a net eagle on the fifteenth hole, where he dropped a birdie putt, and another on the fifteenth, where he holed a putt for an eagle 3, and the stroke allowance left him with a net 2, three under par.

However, when Brownell missed, Stevens was there. The latter birdied the tenth hole, where his partner took a bogey 5 and did the same thing on the seventh, a birdie where Bobby bogeyed. The Manor Club assistant parred two other holes when his amateur partner missed regulation figures.

Mattison and Dale, Houghton's partners, helped their pro by three strokes each for a second place deadlock. Houghton and his third partner, E. B. Heimer, had 64, and were tied by Lewis Wrosham and Jock Olmstead, and Ralph Beach and Arnold Litman, Suburban.

The amateurs also figured in the prize list with 65 best balls, the teams including Worsham and John Brooks, and Al Jamison and Don Dudley, Bradley Hills.

Worsham's one under par 69 was good for second money in the pro sweepstakes while third prize went to Leo Walper who was even par 70.

Brownell also tied for low net in the amateur handicap event with 70—3—67, with Mel Shipley of the host club, 73—6—67, and Jock Olmsted, Indian Spring, with the same score. Two Baltimore players tied for second low net, Arnold Litman, 78—10—68, and J. W. Frederick, 75—7—68, while J. C. Barrett, 81—12—69, Tom Carrick, 79—10—69, and Spencer Overton, 71—2—69, were third.

Brownell's 70 was the lowest gross score among the simon-pures with Spencer Overton's 71 next.

Baltimore's Junior Golf Team Victor

District Youngsters Lose by Two Points At Argyle Club

Earle Skinner's all-star junior line-up failed to show its clippings to Baltimore's junior golfers yesterday and the Monumental City linksmen beat the Washington boys, 8½ to 6½, in somewhat of an upset, over the Argyle course.

The locals were heavy favorites in the second annual intercity match, but the visitors swept three points in the first foursome and were stronger on down the line.

District Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart was the first of the locals to take a beating, Maryland intercollegiate titleholder handing the 20-year-old Congressional player a 3 and 2 handicap. In the same match, Earle Skinker, captain of the team, watched Herbert Wagner play three under par golf for 15 holes and win, 5 and 4.

Playing over his home course, District Junior Champion Bill Cassidy turned in the biggest margin of victory for the hosts, a 6 and 5 triumph over Dexter Chapin. Freddie Bolton, the State junior champ, matched regulation figures in defeating Chick Beeler, of Baltimore, 3 and 1.

Bolton was the only member of the District's "big four" to win, as in addition to Bogart and Skinker, George Vass, jr., of Kenwood, lost on the eighteenth to Arthur Johnson.

Baltimore, 8½; Washington, 6½

Eddie Johnston (Baltimore) defeated Ralph Bogart (Washington), 3 and 2; Herbert Wagner (Baltimore) defeated Earle Skinker (Washington), 6 and 4. Best ball—Baltimore, 3 and 2.

Freddie Bolton (Washington) defeated Chuck Beeler (Baltimore), 3 and 1; Frank Dunham, jr., (Washington) defeated Duncan McRae (Baltimore), 2 and 1. Best ball—Washington, 3 and 2.

Arthur Johnson (Baltimore) defeated George Vass, jr., (Washington), 1 up; Bill Cassidy (Washington) defeated Dexter Chapin (Baltimore), 6 and 5. Best ball—Washington, 3 and 2.

Howard Kammaier (Baltimore) defeated Arthur Myers (Baltimore), 2 and 1; Buster Mrstik (Washington) defeated Eddie Litzan (Baltimore), 3 and 2. Best ball—Baltimore, 2 up.

Jimmy Downey (Baltimore) and Johnny Vandergrift (Washington), all even; Carroll Brooks (Baltimore) defeated Jimmy Brantley (Washington), 1 up. Best ball—Baltimore, 1 up.

third—when Leonard fanned the side—and the fifth.

The Nats helped Leonard out of threatening situations with three double plays. After he walked McQuinn to start the second inning, Susce grounded into the box and Leonard rifled the ball to Pofahl who relayed it to first for a double play. In the sixth, Buddy Myer turned Judnich's grounder into a double play ball after Grace opened the inning with a single, and in the ninth, after McQuinn singled, Pofahl made a spectacular one-hand stop to start a double play on Berardino.

Buddy Lewis, George Case and Leonard each collected a pair of the Nats' eight hits. Nothing more than a single was achieved by either team during the afternoon. Lewis delivered the important blows, with each of his hits figuring in a Washington run.

Monday Bout Winner Seen Next Champ

Jannazzo's Pilot Makes Prediction; Williams Respected

Guy Anselmi, fiery manager of Izzy Jannazzo, yesterday predicted in a long message relayed to Matchmaker Gabe Menedez that the winner of the ten-rounder next Monday night at Griffith Stadium between Jannazzo and Holman Williams, Joe Louis' protege, would be the next welterweight champion of the world.

Exuding nothing short of confidence, Anselmi said that the "next champion will be Jannazzo—and that if Izzy didn't win, Williams would be the man to win the title."

Anselmi said he could see no reason why the N. B. A. wouldn't O. K. this bout as leading to a shot at Cocoa Kid, with the winner to be declared champion. "Armstrong has not defended his title against a legitimate contender since the night he fought Ceferina Garcia," Anselmi pointed out in his telegram.

He added: "Jannazzo is rounding out into great shape, and has to be, as this Holman Williams is a great fighter. Williams is the welterweight to beat for the title. Jannazzo or Williams can beat Armstrong any time. I don't think the others in the division can get past either of these boys."

Matchmaker Menendez pointed out that Jannazzo fought Steve Mamakos with one hand broken, and won going away. "If he can beat Steve with one hand, what could he have done with two good hands?" he asks. That fact, Menendez claims, will boost Izzy's stock considerably for the Monday fight.

Florida Girl Advances in Parks Tennis

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Martha Barnett Andrade, of Jacksonville, Fla., pretty Southern queen, who is defending her crown, swept aside Mrs. Alice McDonald, the Chicago City champion, 6—1, 6—1, in the quarter-finals of the women's singles in the National Public Parks Tennis Tournament today.

Mrs. McDonald, who successfully overcame tough opposition yesterday in defeating Kay Welsh, of Pittsburgh, played a steady game, but was no equal for the hard-driving Mrs. Andrade.

Willis Anderson, the Los Angeles whirlwind, who lost the Public Parks championship last year, trounced Eugene Quinn, of Chicago, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2, and moved into the quarter-finals of the men's division.

Bill Maul, of Detroit, downed Walter Smigel, of East Cleveland, in a lengthy battle to move up to the quarter-finals. The scores were 3—6, 6—2, 6—0, 0—6, 6—1.

Harold Jensen, of Minneapolis, upset seeded Benny Laevin, tough Chicago star, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Mrs. Merceina Weiss Parker, of St. Louis, second seeded in the women's division, defeated Dorothy Busch, of Minneapolis, in straight sets, 6—3, 7—5. Robin Briscoe, of Los Angeles, ousted Bernadine Schriener, of St. Paul, 6—0, 6—3.

ON FISHING

Torn Between Baby And Fishing, Angler Asks Many Questions

An angler has recently moved to Arlington, Va., bringing with him in addition to his missus "a trunk full of tackle and a 10-month-old daughter, the second item making the first superfluous for the time being."

Those anglers who raise their fishing companions instead of taking them where they find them must expect to take their fishing on the run, in such a case. That seems to be just what this angler is determined to do, for he is asking for any kind of fishing he can get between bottles (baby).

ACKERMAN

Because his questions might be of interest to other newcomers, here they are.

How far up the Potomac do Norfolk spot come? Do they bite during the day? Is tide information important? And is there any closeby place where dock-fishing or casting from the shore may be accomplished?

Norfolk spot never run above good salt water, which in the Potomac is about Cedar Point with normal flow of water. And they aren't a bit choosey about the tide, biting on one as well as the other because they are gross, but particular feeders. Bloodworms is the only acceptable bait easily available. And, there are few places they may be caught from docks or from the shore. Their choice feeding grounds are lumps in tide-ways and on shell bottom so prolific in small crustacea and tiny marine life.

Another question is: May bass and crappie fishing be accomplished in Bull Run with artificial lures or is it a bait proposition? Can Bull Run be waded or fished from the bank, or is a boat required? Is the stream unduly posted, and from what town is it convenient? Last, where may I purchase the necessary Virginia license?

Artificial lures may be used, according to the condition of the water, and Bull Run can be fished in any one, or all three ways, noted, depending on just where the stream is fished. It can be reached from Route 211 near Gainesville or from the road between Centerville and Manassas, and from the road from Fairfax to Middleburg, by using country roads. The license may be obtained at any Virginia county seat.

Building-Loan Assets Climb $16,820,000

Combined Resources Of 28 Capital Units At $149,937,000

Combined assets of 28 members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League totaled $149,937,000 as of July 31, an increase of $16,820,000 as compared with the same date last year. The figures were made public yesterday by F. Willson Camp, secretary of the league.

"Continued building activity in and around the city is reflected in the increase in mortgage loans outstanding," Mr. Camp stated. "In 1939 home loans aggregating $122,905,700 were in force. This year the total has risen $17,478,866 and now stands at $140,384,566.

Mortgage loans approved during the last month rose 28 per cent over July a year ago. Local associations approved nearly three and a half million dollars of mortgage loans last month, the great bulk of which was for new houses and other construction purposes.

"Further analysis of the report shows that Washington savers placed over $14,000,000 in the various units during the year as share money mounted from $119,700,000 in 1939 to a high water mark of $133,700,000 as of July 31 this year."

Local Dividends

Directors of Woodward & Lothrop have declared the regular quarterly dividends of 50 cents and $1.75 per share on the common and preferred stocks, respectively. Both dividends are payable September 27 to holders of record September 16.

Directors of the Lincoln Service Corporation, local industrial banking firm, have declared regular quarterly dividends as follows: 1½ per cent on the participating preferred stock; 1¾ per cent on the prior preferred stock and 25 cents on the common stock. All are payable September 12 to holders of record August 31.

Two Planes Delivered

United Air Lines took delivery yesterday of two of four Lockheed Lodestar planes which recently were ordered to augment United's fleet of 59 twin-engined transports, it war announced by J. A. Herlihy, executive vice president. The other two will be delivered later this month and all four placed in service in September.

The Lockheeds, purchased at a cost of $83,000 each, are reputed to be the fastest transport planes in the world, cruising at speeds up to 240 miles an hour.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 21 (AP).—Buying of flour which stimulated milling business the last few days subsided today, permitting wheat prices to sag about a cent before recovering partially.

Wheat values at the close Tuesday had risen more than 3 cents from the season's lowa established Friday. This attracted profit taking which, supplemented by hedging of limited quantities of new wheat offered for sale, caused prices to drift lower as soon as milling support diminished.

Wheat advanced as much as ⅞ cent in early dealings, stimulated by strength in securities, mill buying and the optimistic tenor of British war statements. Around midsession, however, prices dipped as much as 1⅛ cents from the early highs. Closing figures were ⅛-⅛ lower than yesterday, September 70⅝@70¾, December 71⅛@72.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛ off. September 61, December 55⅝@55¼; oats unchanged to ¼ lower; rye ⅛-¾ down; lard 5-13 higher.

Trade developments had varying effects on outside markets. Minneapolis wheat advanced about a cent at one stage and closed ⅛-¾ higher. Kansas City prices were ⅛-1⅛ cent lower at one time and closed ⅛-1¼ down.

Buenos Aires wheat tumbled more than 2 cents on top of corresponding losses yesterday. Minimum prices in effect since last May were abolished a few days ago. Winnipeg prices held at minimum quotations, as has been the case ever since June 20.

Rye slipped about a cent at one time, lack of foreign demand to absorb the surplus is a bearish factor, traders said.

Lard advanced 13 cents or more but later lost most of this gain.

Bethlehem to Fix Minimum Wage Of 62½c an Hour

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—The Bethlehem Steel Co. announced today it would guarantee workers in its steel plants a minimum wage averaging 62½ cents an hour, effective September 1.

The guarantee was posted, the company explained, to conform with the minimum wage fixed for Eastern steel centers under the Walsh-Healey Act requirements on Government contracts and to make the Bethlehem plants "fully available" for the national defense program.

A spokesman for Bethlehem said it was undetermined how many workers would receive a wage boost when the guarantee becomes effective. Average earnings, he added, have been well above the 62½-cent minimum.

The guarantee, it was pointed out, will apply to those employed on commercial as well as on Government work.

Bethlehem—its orders swollen by naval and other Government contracts—recently reported a pay roll of 110,000 workers and a record total of nearly $500,000,000 in unfilled business.

Goodyear to Step Up Synthetic Production

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 21 (AP).—Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. today announced plans for stepping up its production of synthetic rubber.

P. W. Litchfield, president, said a new plant would be installed at Akron in existing buildings with an initial capacity of 10,000 pounds per day of the synthetic staple. For three years the company has been producing "chemigum," its synthetic rubber product in laboratories and in a small pilot plant.

Company makes automobile equipment and other industrial products at plants in Connecticut, New Jersey, Wisconsin, South Carolina and Pennsylvania.

McKesson to Seek Tax Refund in Coster Swindle

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—McKesson & Robbins, Inc., announced today it would seek a refund of $303,000 in Federal income taxes on "the fictitious income included by the late F. Donald Coster in the company's tax return for 1937."

Court proceedings after Coster's suicide in December, 1938, disclosed that Coster, also known as Coster-Musica, had faked huge company assets in swindling operations.

William J. Wardall, trustee of McKesson & Robbins, said he would file the tax claim with the Internal Revenue collector at Hartford, Conn. He said similar claims for $233,000 and $410,000 had been filed previously for 1935 and 1936.

Stock Prices Gain $1 to $3 in Brisker Trade; Sentiment Is More Cheerful in Wall Street

New York, Aug. 21.—Gains of 1 to 3 points in representative stocks, strength in United States Government bonds, gains of 1 to 6 points in foreign bonds and a better tone in a number of the commodities, including cotton, characterized today's markets in the world of finance.

Over and above the statistics, there was the far more important influence of a better sentiment among investors. When it comes to describing sentiment it cannot be done by saying that two plus two makes four, because it is one of the things that is felt and not one which can be described by citing the figures on carloadings, textile output or operating rates in the steel industry. It's just there, and it can be felt, but it isn't measured by charts.

Smiles Replace Frowns

That is what happened today. It seems difficult to realize after today's welcome performance and the good market of Tuesday to realize that only two days ago we had the dullest marked in 24 years on the New York Stock Exchange. For there has been no sensational development in this brief space of 48 hours, yet there are smiles in the investment world in place of the frowns and down at the heel look which was everywhere early this week.

Washington has done nothing to assure companies of fair depreciation on expansions which they undertake, for patriotic reasons, in order to forward the defense program, the betting odds do not tell a story of any more confidence that we will get a business Government in place of the present political control by a group within the Democratic Party. There have been no violent upswings in business, but there is in the air a conviction that Monday saw the low; that from there on things are going to get better. It is something that can't be measured with an ammeter; but it is present.

Trading Expands

The day's record was as follows: The average for the market advanced 0.52 point; trading expanded to 360,310 shares; cotton futures advanced 2 to 8 points; wheat futures recovered after an early sinking spell, but closed off ⅛ to 1½ cents a bushel; a new high for the year was set by the public utility industry for power output; the price of lead and scrap copper was advanced; the Automobile Manufacturers Association estimated the retail sales of passenger cars and trucks for the first seven months of the year as 28.3 per cent above the like figures for a year ago; there was a slight upward turn in steel buying and a number of representative companies submitted earning statements which made favorable comparisons with 1939.

There were a few items of a contrary nature. A membership on the Stock Exchange sold for $35,000, which is the lowest price since 1914, when World War No. 1 broke out. In politics there was general disappointment that the President finds his time too occupied to debate the issues of the campaign with Wendell Willkie.

Aircrafts Lead Rise

Aircrafts gave the best individual performance in today's trading. Their strength accompanies additional announcements of cases where companies are risking going ahead with expansions, in order to take care of Government contracts, even though they have no legal assurance that their added costs can be written off in the next few years.

According to a statement in Washington, signed by a number of leading individuals in the aviation industry, the industry is ready to build airplanes first and talk about profits afterward. The assumption that they will be permitted to make a fair profit brought support to the aviation shares today. As matters now stand, however, there is no assurance that eventually they will not have to accept losses. United Aircraft joined the growing list of companies which are making major expansions to care for additional orders.

Loft Rises Briskly

The day's most active stock was of the nonwar class. It was Loft, which jumped more than a point on approval of the Pepsi-Cola-Loft settlement. Steel and Bethlehem were up more than a point each. Chrysler added 2½ and General Motors 1⅛. Commonwealth & Southern preferred was up 3. Gains of 2 points or more were made by Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Sears Roebuck, Du Pont and Allied Chemical, while good progress was made by American Smelting, Nickel, Manville and Union Pacific. A large Government order brought buying to Savage Arms, which soared 3¾. Electric Auto-Lite gained 2, Yellow Truck was slightly higher, and after the close the company cleared up the arrears on its 7 per cent preferred stock.

Cotton Futures

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—A last-minute buying flurry gave cotton futures final gains of 2 to 8 points today. Traders took their cues almost entirely from rising securities markets. Contracts came out reluctantly with most offerings in the form of hedging. Trade and spot interests were on the buying side throughout. The late rally stemmed from covering purchases. Wall Street buying and a sprinkling of price-fixing orders.

The market saw the rosy side of a London announcement freight allocations for September wood remain at 50,000 bales, including barter and commercial cotton. Many traders saw indications more United States cotton would be imported in future months, provided shipping conditions permit.

Worth Street reported a tight situation had developed among heavier types of cotton cloth as a result of increased Government demand. Civilian buying, however, was disappointing.

No exports Tuesday; season so far, 37,931 bales; port receipts 14,610; port stocks 2,509,075. Range follows:

Tobacco Review

The Agricultural Marketing Service reports average prices generally stronger on most of the lower grades of tobacco sold on the southern Maryland auction markets on August 19 and 20 as compared with the previous week. Gains of from $1 to $3 were shown in practically all of the lower grades except low quality dull crop, and the dark grades of dull. All of the better qualities of bright and dull crop were steady. A definite increase has been shown in the quantity of tobacco offered on the floors and the general quality has improved somewhat.

Ban on Imports Drops English Bank Notes

Price Cracks 35 Cents A Pound Sterling in New York Market

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 21.—The price of English bank notes today cracked to around $3.15 for one pound sterling from $3.50 after announcement London had forbade import of currency.

Banking circles pointed out the restriction had no connection with the price of free or official sterling.

Brokers in foreign money reported a deluge of offerings of English money. Many forecast the price would break still further.

United States holders can deliver their English money to a local bank up to August 27 and the proceeds will be credited to a registered account. Free sterling now is around $4 and official sterling is sold by New York banks at $4.04. Business at the free and official prices is done exclusively by cables and checks.

The British order was interpreted in banking quarters as a possible move toward forestalling creation of a "black bourse" in bank notes. Such markets usually spring up when the currency of a nation has one value internally and another externally.

Blow Aimed at Nazis

London, Aug. 20.—The treasury announced a ban on the importation of Bank of England notes into the United Kingdom today on the ground that considerable amounts fell into German hands in France and other German-occupied territory.

Special steps are being taken to permit existing holders of bank notes in neutral countries to realize on them. Inside the sterling area, Bank of England notes will continue to be freely negotiable and the prohibition will not apply to notes from Erie. Travelers from abroad will be permitted to bring in 10 pounds (about $40 at official prices).

Air-Rail Freight Company Studied

By the Associated Press

Officials of the Association of American Railroads said yesterday a plan has been presented to it for the formation of an air freight company to be owned jointly by the country's railroads and airlines.

An association spokesman said the proposal now was being "analyzed."

While details were not announced officially, it was reported that the first work of such a company would be investigation and cost studies of air freight operations based on the development of new types of cargo planes. There was an estimate that as much as two years would be required to complete basic studies.

Curtiss-Wright Plans Huge Plant in Ohio

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—The Curtiss-Wright Corporation announced today plans for a huge airplane engine factory at Lockland, Ohio, near Cincinnati, designed to employ between 12,000 and 15,000 workers. Contracts will be let immediately, it was said, for more than $8,000,000 in machine tools and construction will be pushed in an effort to reach full production in record time.

Wright Aeronautical Corporation, engine-building subsidiary of Curtiss-Wright, last month arranged for a $92,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to increase its output by 12,000 motors annually.

United Aircraft Plans Expansion Of $15,000,000

New York, Aug. 21 (AP).—United Aircraft Corporation today announced a further expansion in East Hartford and Stratford, Conn., plants at an estimated cost of close to $15,000,000.

Eugene E. Wilson, president of the company, said complete plans for the corporation's participation in the United States defense program had been worked out with the National Defense Advisory Committee.

"During the last 18 months," said Wilson, "we have added $16,000,000 in plant account and have increased our employment from 5,000 to 15,000 persons. This next expansion will add nearly $15,000,000 to our investment."

Wilson estimated that employment for Listen!

with Glynn

All these years you've been listening to radio programs and putting up with the comedians' jokes and very often come to the conclusion that lots of them sounded pretty reminiscent of something you'd heard before.

A great many of you must have tried to trace back the origins of those jokes, to remember that they were something you'd heard grandfather tell in your very early youth. But some of them you couldn't be quite sure of. They sounded familiar but you couldn't put your finger on where they came from.

Well, a modern Diogenes has come along to try to put you straight on what are decidedly old—very old—jokes. He's making a collection, what he calls "a chestnut harvest," of the most ancient wheezes he can dig up. He's going to label them honestly as such and tell you a couple of them on each of his radio programs within the next several weeks. Unadulterated humor, it might be called, and pleasantly educational.

And since he's Strickland Gillilan, who's made it a business to write and tell stories well for many years so it should be quite interesting to listen to. Furthermore, he invites your cooperation in uncovering with him as many of the old anecdotes as you can remember which are the basis for modern jest.

His broadcasts are heard over WJSV every Sunday night at 10:15.

Today's Radio Highlights

1 p. m., WMAL—"Spectator War" is Margaret Culkin Banning's subject for the ninth talk in her current series, It Looks From Here.

1:15, WMAL—Mr. Herbert Morrison, leading member of the British Parliament, talks to America on "Arms Speed-up."

6:15 p. m., WJSV—The Golden Gate Quartet, boogie-woogie and swing purveyors, join Lanny Ross for a session of spirituals on his thrice-weekly quarter-hour.

6:30, WJSV—Vox Pop hits Society with the capital "S," when Wally Butterworth and Parks Johnson set up their mike at the lawn party given for Emily "Paddy" Vanderbilt in Portsmouth, R. I., by her father and mother, Gov. and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt.

7:30, WOL—The Ritz Brothers, marked-down version of les freres Marx, and funny enough in their fashion, costar with Raymond Scott and Corinna Mura in Chicago Tonight.

7:30, WJSV—John Hix' Strange As It Seems celebrates its first year on the networks. Tonight's true whopper is a 41-round prize fight that began in a water-flooded ring and was later continued in a blinding snowstorm for four hours. Johnny Reagan it was who fought Jack "The Nonpareil" Dempsey, December 13, 1887.

8, WRC—Elsa Lanchester, whose wit can hold a generous deal of candlelight to that of her husband, Charles Laughton, jousts verbiage with uncouth Bob Burns on the Music Hall.

9:15, WJSV—William Allen White, one of the Nation's most celebrated editors, publisher of The Emporia Gazette, as chairman of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies states his affirmative answer to the question "Should We Sell Destroyers to Britain?"

9:15, WOL—Mutual's Pennant Contenders' program airs from Pittsburgh: Frankie Frisch, Frankie Gustin, Al Lopez and Deb Garms talk about the Pirates' chances with Sports Announcer Jimmy Murray.

9:30, WOL—Walter H. Steindel's Symphony Orchestra plays in Chicago's Grant Park: Massenet's "Scenes Alsaciennes" and the "Ride of the Valkyries" from the Wagner's "Die Walkure."

10:15, WOL—Illinois' pithy, erudite Representative T. V. Smith holds forth on a timely topic. Representative Smith is also a professor of the University of Chicago.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Making the Most of Treason — BY MILTON CANIFF

SENTRIES COMING!
INTO THE SHADOWS, YOU FOOLS! ...TRAITOR, DO AS I TELL YOU!
...WHAT CIRCUMSTANCE IS THIS?
GO AWAY!
...TEN THOUSAND PARDONS! WE DID NOT REALIZE, EXCELLENCY...
ALAS, MY FRIEND, WE ARE THE CONQUERORS, BUT THE PUPPET RULER ENJOYS THE SPOILS!! THAT IS WAR, I SUPPOSE!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

I'M SO GLAD YOU STOPPED IN, MR. SCREED! JOHN NEEDS CHEERING UP--BADLY!
I'M AFRAID I'M NOT THE MAN TO DO IT, LEONA!
I JUST GOT SOME ADVANCE RETURNS ON OUR STRAW VOTE-- JOHN HAS SLIPPED BEHIND GOVERNOR SWILLER, SINCE THEY PINNED THAT PURPLE SHIRTS MEMBERSHIP ON HIM!
OH, CAN'T ANYTHING BE DONE--?
MIGHTY TOUGH GOING! WHOEVER'S BACK OF THIS SMEAR CAMPAIGN IS SMART AS SATAN! NO MATTER WHAT JOHN SAYS AGAINST THEM, THE PURPLE SHIRTS IGNORE IT AND GO ON "HAILING" HIM!
WHY, THOSE RATS HAVE EVEN HAD THE GALL TO INVITE JOHN TO ADDRESS THEIR BIG RALLY MONDAY NIGHT!
GOOD!... AND I'M GOING TO ACCEPT!

DONALD DUCK — The Wheels of Progress — BY WALT DISNEY

MICKEY FINN — The Gangs All Here! — BY LANK LEONARD

YOU MEAN MUFF IS SENDIN' OVER SOME HOODLUMS TO BREAK UP THE RALLY?
BIG RALLY TONIGHT
PHIL FINN for ALDERMAN
IF GABBY DON'T GET HERE BEFORE THE PARADE GETS BACK AND THE CROWD STARTS GOIN' IN, YOUR PLAN WON'T WORK, MICKEY!
HERE HE COMES NOW!

DIXIE DUGAN — No Privacy — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

IT WAS YOUR BROTHER — SPYIN' ON US!
WHY — TH' OLE MEANIE!
JUST WHEN I THOUGHT WE'D HAVE A LITTLE PRIVACY FOR A SWIM
THEY'RE GOING AWAY THOUGH
I GUESS IT'S O.K. TO GO IN NOW
BUT, IN A NEARBY FIELD, —— A YOUNG FARMER, A BIT IRRITATED BY LACK OF RAIN, NOTICED THE QUEER ACTION OF FARMER'S PLANE
CIRCLING AROUND AND DIVING OVER MY WOODS — GOODNIGHT — NO PRIVACY ON MY OWN FARM — WONDER WHAT INTERESTED THEM SO?

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Assignment — BY FRANK V. MARTINEK

WINSLOW, WHILE YOUR WOUND IS HEALING YOU CAN STILL PERFORM A GREAT SERVICE TO AMERICA'S NATIONAL DEFENCE
OUR GOVERNMENT IS PLACING ORDERS FOR ARMY AND NAVY EQUIPMENT IN HUNDREDS OF OUR COUNTRY'S MANUFACTURING COMPANIES. THESE PLANTS MUST BE SHOWN HOW TO GUARD AGAINST SPIES AND SABOTAGE
AND THAT'S WHERE I COME IN, SIR?
EXACTLY! YOU CAN START WITH SOME OF THE NEW AIRPLANE FACTORIES IN CALIFORNIA
WHILE AT THIS MOMENT IN THE OUTSKIRTS OF LOS ANGELES—
AH! HERE'S THE PLACE! NOW WATCH THE SCORPION MOVE RIGHT IN!

HOTEL
PAMELA AND I ARE OFF FOR THE MEETING WITH EMPRESS ZORENA, CHIEF!
BADLY AS I WANT THOSE OIL CONTRACTS FOR MY COUNTRY I WISH YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO GO ALONE, STEVE!
STOP FRETTING, PAM! THAT BUSINESS OF ME SHOWING UP WITH A ROPE AND A BLINDFOLD IS PROBABLY ZORENA'S IDEA OF A JOKE!
WE'LL START THE LONG TRIP HOME AS SOON AS I RETURN, WAHOO— YOU MIGHT SPEND THE TIME PACKING OUR STUFF WHILE I'M GONE!
OKAY, STEVE, —MEBBE!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

KNOCKING SAM AGAINST THE RAIL, KING AND KID GET TO THE WHEEL, BUT THE BOAT WALLOWS HELPLESSLY IN THE POUNDING SURF-- WE'LL BE SWAMPED! THE BEAM BREAKING OVER US!
START BAILING!
KING! THAT WAVE WASHED SAM OVERBOARD!
IT'S IMPOSSIBLE TO HELP HIM—THE BOAT'S OUT OF CONTROL!
